Baby Clipper Is Given Up As Doomed By Croydon

Field Lights Turned Out at Airport; Smith's Gas Supply Limit Was 42 Hours

By the Associated Press.

London (Tuesday), May 30.—Officials at London's Croydon Airport early today gave up hope of sighting Thomas H. Smith, attempting a transatlantic flight in a midget plane, and snapped off the boundary lights at 2 a. m. (9 p. m., E. S. T. Monday.)

Darkening of the field seemed an admission by the officials that they did not expect the young West Virginian to arrive here.

The flier had been en route from the United States nearly 42 hours, the extreme limit which he had estimated his gas would last.

The 65-horsepower craft had been reported over Londonderry in northern Ireland, Port Patrick at Wigtownshire in the extreme southwest of Scotland, and Saint Bees Head, Cumberland, northern England, but none of the reports was official and identification of the plane as Smith's was not certain.

Many Other Reports

Scores of other reports had been received by newspapers from persons telephoning that they had seen a tiny plane at various points.

Before taking off at Old Orchard Beach, Me., at 3:47 a. m. (E. S. T.) Sunday he had estimated his 160 gallons of gasoline would carry him 36 to 42 hours.

Officials, newspapermen and photographers kept watch at Croydon in the hope of giving the flier a welcome. But the crowd that had gathered in the afternoon disappeared by midnight.

Flying a 670-pound, single-engined monoplane, Smith attempted to span the Atlantic in the smallest plane ever taxed with that assignment since the first successful North Atlantic crossing (by stages) 20 years ago.

"Sheer Madness"

Officials at Croydon openly expressed doubt he would make it.

"To attempt such a flight in an 85-mile-an-hour plane was sheer madness," said one.

Smith carried no radio transmitting equipment and confirmation that the plane seen was his was impossible. He had a radio receiver, however.

Smith headed his plane out over the Atlantic without having first obtained permission for such a flight from the Civil Aeronautics Authority in Washington.

He had a screw driver and a single wrench for a tool kit, and although he expected to be in the air for more than a day and a half, carried only four sandwiches, a couple of chocolate bars, and thermos bottles of water and a soft drink. His fuel and oil were said to cost less than $30.

160 Gallons of Gas

His 160 gallons of gas was enough to fly about 3,600 miles at a cruising speed of 100 miles an hour.

The distance from Old Orchard Beach to Croydon is 3,100 miles.

Smith, who has been flying nine years despite his relative youth, formerly lived in Clarksburg, W. Va., and has been a pilot for the Detroit-St. Louis-Marquette Line.

As Smith took off he did not name a destination. "Europe is as close as I can tell you," he said. Associates thought he would point his tiny monoplane for Slyne Head, Ireland, 2,800 miles away.

The last ocean flight except for commercial transports was from Moscow to Miscou Island, New Brunswick, where the Russian fliers Vladimir Kokkinaki and Mikhail Gordienko, were forced down April

Vandenberg Advocates 1-Term Pledge

Indicates He Would Accept Nomination With That Restriction

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, yesterday asserted Republicans should nominate a 1940 Presidential candidate "prepledged" to one term, and plainly indicated he would accept the nomination if tendered him.

"No man understanding its difficulties and responsibilities could covet the Presidency and no American could decline it if chosen," Vandenberg wrote Gov. Dickinson of Michigan and Representative Carl E. Mapes, head of the Michigan House Republican delegation.

Thanking Dickinson and Mapes for "draft Vandenberg" expressions from prominent Michigan Republicans, Vandenberg said the next Republican convention "must strive to create common ground upon which all like-thinkers may unite to produce an administration for all Americans in which a prepledged, one-term President is manifestly free of all incentive but the one job of saving America."

Indorse One-Term Pledge

Democrats were noncommittal or jocular in their comments, but Republican Senators generally indorsed the one-term Presidential pledge proposal.

Senator Townsend, of Delaware, chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, said he had long advocated such a pledge, while Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, said the next President "ought not to do the things usually done to obtain re-election.

"He will have to do a lot of things that will make him unpopular here in Washington," said Taft. "He will have to slash away parts of the New Deal and cut expenditures right and left."

Representative Mapes, who last week sent Vandenberg the "draft" statement from Michigan Republicans, said the Senator's reply had "encouraged his friends to believe

President Asks $340,000 to Explore Antarctic

President Roosevelt asked Congress ytesterday to appropriate $340,000 for an exploratory expedition to the Antarctic regions.

The request was made by forwarding to Congress an estimate from the budget bureau that this sum would be needed to finance the expedition being arranged by the Interior Department.

Plans for the expedition, which is expected to lay claim on behalf of the United States to a vast segment of the Antarctic continent, already have been worked out

Trial Heats For 1940

If Roosevelt and Dewey were the candidates in 1940, for which would you vote? Suppose the choice were between Garner and Vandenberg? Between Hull and Taft? The Gallup Poll is running a series of "trial heats" to determine the present sentiment of the country toward leading candidates of both parties. The Roosevelt-Taft trial heat result will appear in tomorrow's Post with a summary of the findings on other such polls.

Nation Pays Soldier Dead Honor Today

D. C. to Stage First Memorial Parade in Three Years; Rites At Arlington

The Nation and its Capital will stop work today to pay homage in solemn pageantry to the memory of its departed soldiers.

In Arlington National Cemetery amid ranks of gleaming headstones and wherever else a bit of marble marks the last resting place of a veteran, tiny flags will fly and spring flowers lie on grassy mounds.

For the first time in three years beginning at 9:45 a. m. the Memorial Day parade will move along Constitution avenue, mingling the still living comrades of the sleeping fighters and the ranks of the modern soldier.

These will be the principal manifestations of the city's remembrance of its war heroes, but for thousands of its residents the day is one for play as well as patriotic festival. For them golf courses, parks and bathing places in Washington and two States have arranged for record throngs.

Fair Weather Forecast

Nearly all the approximately 120,000 Federal employes will be released from their desks for the day. Only those will be kept at work whose duties involve the safety of buildings or tasks that are imperative even on a holiday.

For employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, a four-day week-end will end tomorrow, a holiday windfall resulting from rearrangement of their five-day week.

The weather man last night forecast ideal holiday weather conditions—fair and cooler. But rain or shine, the parade which has drawn thousands of visitors to the city, will move promptly at 9:45 a. m. from Fourth street and Constitution avenue. The route will be along Constitution avenue to the disbanding point at Virginia avenue.

In the first division will be the service organizations, headed by the Army Band and including the Marine and Navy bands. Veterans' organizations will comprise the second division and veterans auxiliaries the third.

Bands of the second division will include the Elks Boys Band, Overseas Band, Drum and Bugle Corps of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Fort Stevens Post Drum and Bugle Corps and the James Reese Europe Drum and Bugle Corps.

In Third Division

In the third division will be the Sons of the American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps and the Holy Comforter Boys Band.

The District Commissioners, Melvin C. Hazen and Col. David McCoach, jr., will be in the reviewing stand with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; Gen. Frnak T. Hines, veterans' administrator; Brig. Gen. Maxwell Murray, U. S. A.; Brig. Gen. E. A. Ostermann, U. S. M. C.; Admiral William Leahy, Chief of Operations, U. S. N.; Rear Admiral John Downes, U. S. N., and Col. J. W. N. Schulz, U. S. A. Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox will be the parade grand marshal.

The holiday's second ceremonial highlight will be the annual observance at the Arlington Amphitheater, starting promptly at 12:45 p. m., Senator Robert A. Taft, Ohio's favorite son for the Republican Presidential nomination, will be the orator.

Officials of the observance anticipate a capacity throng when the Department Commander of the G. A. R., John M. Kline, calls the assemblage to order and presents the presiding officer, James G. Yaden, past department commander of the United Spanish War Veterans.

Lanny Ross, radio star, will sing the "Star Spangled Banner" and the "Recessional." Harlan Wood, past department commander of the Girl Drops Wreath on Waters Above Squalus, Tomb of Fiance

Portsmouth, N. H., May 29.—A brown-haired girl kept a ghostly rendezvous today with the sailor boy who was to have been her bridegroom but who lay in death on the ocean floor—a victim of the submarine Squalus' fatal plunge.

Not far from the point off the Isle of Shoals which marks the temporary tomb of her sweetheart, Sherman Shirley, of Little Rock, Ark., and 25 other heroes of the ill-starred submarine, pretty Ruth Desautel, 20, stood in the stern of the little lobster boat Marjorie Ann and tossed a small wreath on the waters of the Atlantic.

It was her own Memorial Day service for Shirley, for she will not attend the public services at the Navy Yard tomorrow.

The wreath bobbed on the waves, as the girl, dry-eyed and silent, bowed her head in private prayer.

A somber company watched with her in the wind-swept craft.

There were no dramatics, no tearful words. The little craft bobbed as the swish of the wind and the lapping of the waves provided the only sounds of requiem. And then, the slim girl resumed her seat in the stern as the Marjorie Ann put about for her home port.

Just as the fishing boat nestled to her anchorage, Ruth saw the sleek submarine Sculpin, sister craft of the Squalus, heading into port from the rescue scene.

She watched it for a full minute before starting silently for her home at Dover.

Pittman Warns Against Arms Ban Filibuster

Hints at Special Session if Necessary To Repeal Embargo

By Robert C. Albright.

Despite warnings of a Senate filibuster, Chairman Key Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, last night determined to press for neutrality act amendment this session and hinted at a special session if Congress adjourns without action.

"I believe the President will call Congress back if the present law is allowed to stand and a serious war threatens abroad," Senator Pittman told reporters.

Pittman called Secretary of State Hull's recommendation for repeal of the mandatory embargo provisions of the neutrality act and exclusion of American travel in set war zones "an indorsement of the principle of my own bill." He said he believes a majority of his committee agrees with the Hull proposals.

"Cash-Carry" Bill Offered

Pittman decided to ask his committee to fix a time for a vote on various neutrality amendments when it meets tomorrow.

Meantime, Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, acting chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, introduced his "trade at your own risk" bill, with "cash and carry" amendments, bringing it into line with the Hull proposals. Like the Pittman bill in the Senate, the new Bloom measure would repeal existing mandatory arms embargo provisions, and would prohibit shipments to belligerents in wartime in any vessel

Bridges 'Fine' After Operation; Sumners Very Well

Senator Styles Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, was reported "perfectly fine" yesterday at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore after a minor operation to his nose, performed by Dr. Leroy Polvogt. At the Senator's office it was stated that the operation was expected to give him greater relief from colds.

Dr. Polvogt pronounced the Senator's condition "splendid," and added, "I expect him to be able to leave the hospital within four or five days," according to the Associated Press.

Meanwhile Representative Hatton W. Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, who developed a respiratory infection about a week ago following an operation, was "doing very well" last night, according to Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn. Now in George Washington University Hospital, he should be able to leave in another week or so, the doctor said.

Marriage License Business Doubles

June moved in three days early yesterday at the marriage license counter of the District Court clerk's office and doubled the normal volume of applications. The day's total was 53.

Yesterday was the first day on which those who wished to get their licenses in June could apply. Those who applied yesterday will be able to get them Friday.

Japan Claims Defeat of 42 Soviet Planes

Shot Down in Mongolian Border Battles, Assert Nipponese

Special Cable to The Post.

Shanghai, May 29.—The Japanese army spokesman said today Japanese planes shot down 42 Soviet aircraft in three engagements yesterday near Lake Buir, on the outer Mongolian-Manchuko border, 115 miles southwest of Hailar, Manchukuo.

During the battle, he reported Japanese and Manchukuo infantry routed 1,000 Mongolian cavalrymen, equipped with ten tanks and ten field pieces and escorted by 70 Soviet-built planes. He said the Mongolians hal lost 150 dead, while Japanese-Manchukuo losses were 6 killed and 23 wounded.

(Outer Mongolia, which has been independent from China since 1912 except for a brief period from 1919 to 1921, is under Soviet influence, just as Manchuko and Inner Mongolia are controlled by the Japanese. The outer Mongolian army is led by Russians and most of its equipment is Russian. A Soviet-Outer Mongolian tratey signed March 12, 1936, provides mutual assistance in the event either country is attacked.)

Japan Loses One Plane

In two early morning dogfights yesterday, the spokesman said, 5 Soviet planes were shot down, and 6 minutes later the Japanese downed 7 planes of a formation of 20. In the third engagement, he added, 30 Soviet planes were brought down, bringing their losses to 42. The Japanese admitted the loss of only one of their planes, which was disabled and forced down.

The Japanese spokesman also reported that 17 other Soviet planes had been brought down in the Lake Buir area inside Manchukuo territory between May 20 and 27, bringing the total Soviet losses in the last eight days to 59 planes.

Battle in Manchukuo

The land battle occurred near Nomonhan, which is east of Lake Buir in Manchukuo territory. With regard to this incident the government of Manchukuo today issued the following statement:

"Strong forces of Outer Mongolian troops since May 11 have illegally invaded Manchukuo territory in the vicinity of Nomohan. The Manchukuo government strongly protested to the Outer Mongolian government May 15, demanding their immediate withdrawal. To the contrary, Mongolian troops since May 20 have continued to violate Manchukuo territory, aided by powerful air units. In view of the situation, Manchukuo forces in co-operation with Japanese forces, have been obliged to resort to self-defensive measures to repulse the invaders."

The Japanese army spokesman said that, in his opinion, the incident was more serious than the Changkufeng affair of last year, when Soviet and Japanese troops fought in the most serious border clash since the creation of Manchukuo by the Japanese.

Roosevelt Rests At Hyde Park, Plagued by Cold

Hyde Park, N. Y., May 29 (AP).—President Roosevelt, annoyed by a head cold, put in a leisurely day today, looking over his Hudson Valley estate and reading reports from Washington.

He had one caller, James Townsend, chairman of the Dutchess County Democratic Committee. Townsend said that while he did not discuss third-term possibilities with Mr. Roosevelt, the President could have the "solid support" of Democrats in his home county if he decided to run again. The county is heavily Republican by tradition.

To avoid special trains and heavy Memorial Day rail traffic, the President decided to start back to the Capital about midnight tomorrow instead of early in the afternoon. He will reach Washington around breakfast time Wednesday.

Jerusalem Bombs Wound 30 Persons

Jerusalem, May 29 (AP).—Two bombs exploded in a crowded Arab-owned movie theater today and wounded about 30 persons.

Men, women and children were among those injured. A British soldier and four Arabs were dangerously hurt.

Four hundred Jews, apprehended in a schooner midway between Tel Aviv and Haifa as they attempted to enter Palestine illegally, were permitted to disembark. As a result the immigration quota will be reduced by 400.

Honorable Jennings Randolph,
Chairman,
District of Columbia Committee,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Jennings:

Referring to your visit in company with Messrs. Warden and Somerville to Col. McCoach's office yesterday morning I have, at the request of Mr. Warden, examined the statutory provisions of the District of Columbia Code which apply to the bidding upon paving contracts.

The present organic act of the District of Columbia covers the question of street improvements, construction and replacements in Section 5 thereof. Said Section 5 is included in the District of Columbia Code, Title 12, Section 71 to 75 inclusive.

The organic act was passed in 1878 and there have been but few amendments to it and corresponding code sections. All amendments are included in the Code of 1929 with the exception of two amendments to inconsequential parts of said Section 5 of the organic act. These two amendments are contained in the United States Statutes at Large in Volume 47, page 750, Section 3 and Volume 48, page 853, respectively. They do not concern the question which you and Mr.

$1,285,000,000 Pay Roll Tax Saving Seen

Committee Report On Revised Security Bill Proposes Cuts

A confidential report of the House Ways and Means Committee, showing that the revised social security bill will save employers and employes $1,285,000,000 in pay roll taxes in the next three years, was obtained by International News Service last night.

The report also cited that old-age insurance benefits have been liberalized and that aged men, women, dependent parents, and children below 18 years will receive $1,755,000,000 in benefits between 1940 and 1944, inclusive.

About 1,100,000 additional persons will be brought under the old-age pension system by the bill through the addition of seamen, bank employes and persons employed over 65 years old.

Considered in Secret

The Ways and Means Committee considered the report in secret session but adjourned until tomorrow to complete a study of its 111 pages.

Before formally reporting the measure the committee will consider increasing Federal contribution to old-age pensions from $15 to $20 a month and increasing from a third to one-half the amount to be matched by States for benefits to dependent children.

With the Townsend old-age pension plan to be voted on in the House tomorrow, indications are that the increase in Federal old-age pensions will be voted. Thus, in States which grant pensions equal

Randel Highlands Association Has Faith In Representative

Renewed pleas for some form of District self-government coupled with appeals to withhold judgment until all the facts are known came from Washington civic leaders last night following revelation that Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, had requested city officials to alter city paving specifications, a move which would have given preference to a dealer in a certain type of asphalt

Still Blames D. C. Setup

"The poeple up there on the Hill have no interest in the District and can't really be expected to," commented Harry N. Stull, vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations. He added:

"I don't know if this situation will lead to anything or not, but I am sure it's going to be like this until we are able to control our own affairs."

On the other hand, Adelbert W. Lee, president of the Randle Highlands Citizens Association, revealed he had sent Representative Randolph a telegram asking that he reconsider his intention to resign as District Committee chairman.

"I feel that Representative Randolph has performed an outstanding service for the District," Lee said, "and that no one else has done so much for Washington in so short a time. We have every confidence in him, and I feel confident that all

Canada's 4-Ship Navy Salutes King at Pacific Limit of Tour

By Edward T. Folliard

A Staff Correspondent.

Victoria, Canada, May 29.—King George and Queen Elizabeth arrived at the westernmost point of their tour from England late tonight when the Princess Marguerite steamed into the Pacific harbor of Victoria, 6,000 miles from London.

Twenty-one guns roared a salute, and throngs cheered the visiting British soverigns who had left Vancouver four hours earlier on the steamer, escorted by Canada's entire Pacific navy—four destroyers.

More than a half-million subjects and nearly 60,000 Americans joined in the roaring welcome to Their Majesties at Vancouver today.

Ten thousand Chinese and Japanese, waiving the Union Jack, and several hundred bearded and turbanned Hindus lined the 50-mile spectator-jammed parade route, which was dotted with flowered arches and totem poles. The Orientals joined in singing "God Save the King."

Italians turned out in full and unfurled a huge banner which declared: "The Italians of Vancouver offer their grateful and loyal welcome to the King and Queen."

The Japanese colony sent the Queen a basket of flowers.

D. C. Chairman May Quit House Committee; Denies Consideration Offer

By James D. Secrest.

Correspondence revealing the efforts of Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, to persuade Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., to change District asphalt paving specifications in the interest of a New Jersey corporation wa made public last night by the commissioner at Randolph's request.

The letters were released shortly after Representative Randolph had announced at Charleston, W. Va., that he may resign at the conclusion of the District milk investigation.

His announcement was the latest bombshell in a series of explosive developments in the milk inquiry, one of which was the disclosure that police had made dictograph recordings of gay parties in local hotels. The paving deal was disclosed incidentally at one of these parties, and a statement was made that $20,000 was to be paid if it went through.

N. J. Firm Would Benefit

The effect of granting Randolph's request, District officials said, would have been to give the Barber Asphalt Corporation, of Barber, N. J., the exclusive business of furnishing material for all asphalt paving in the National Capital.

The engineer commissioner flatly refused to make the requested change in the District's paving specifications, but he agreed to include the New Jersey corporation's product in a class of bidding to which it heretofore had been barred. The change, however, merely placed the Barber firm on an equal basis with manufacturers of "oil" asphalt.

The Barber corporation, according to District officials, is the sole importer and distributor in Eastern United States of Trinidad natural or "lake" asphalt. For the last 15 years District streets have been paved with the domestically-manufactured "oil" asphalt, a by-product of the petroleum industry, which is marketed at a cheaper price than "lake" asphalt and by numerous manufacturers.

"Considerations" Denied

Randolph at Charleston, where he was making a high school commencement address, denied that he had been promised any "consideration" for his activity. He merely had presented two of his "constituents," he said, to the engineer commissioner.

The "constituents" were Messrs. Warden and Somerville, who spoke for the New Jersey corporation, but were otherwise unidentified. An inquiry in West Virginia failed to disclose any agency of the Trinidad asphalt importer in Randolph's district, but it was learned that A. B. Nelson, of Charleston, W. Va., recently has been appointed a Barber corporation representative for West Virginia.

Introduced by Moler

Randolph last night said that Somerville, a resident of Martinsburg, W. Va., had been introduced to him along with Warden by D. Grove Moler, State senator of West Virginia and Martinsburg lawyer. Warden, he understood, came from out of the State.

Moler, who acted as lawyer for the Barber corporation's interests, is a former partner of Whiting Faulkner, Martinsburg postmaster, who last week was called before the Bates sub-committee in the milk investigation to answer charges that he had offered the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association to deliver the vote of Randolph

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

BAGDAD-ON-THE-POTOMAC

A high official at the War Department tells me, apropos of the Gen. Mosely political schemes, that a retired Army officer is still responsible to the Army for his indiscretions. If he gets out of line, he can be disciplined; as long as he's getting a pension he's still an Army officer.

Bachrach
Cong. Costello (Cal.)
. . . I vs. 360

Mosely's pension is $6,000 a year. But whether any part of an officer's pension could be withheld for such a trifle as political or religious agitation on the fascist side is questionable.

* * * *

It must have grated on crusty old Van Horn Mosely, though, to have a Knight of the White Camelia write to a reserve corps captain about him, a general:

"We have to educate him as to what this is all about without his getting the idea that we are trying to influence him."

Maybe that's punishment enough. Worse than a court martial.

Memo to Hitler: When the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Sayre threw a luncheon for Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary, Vladimir Hurban still appeared on the guest list as the Minister from Czecho-Slovakia . . . Mr. Fish, of New York, and Mr. Hook, of Michigan, exchanged some spirited repartee on the floor of the House of Representatives, believe it or not; it's on page 7191 of the Congressional Record

"—villains of the 1930's"

New Sin: So far the New Deal philosophers haven't quite had the nerve to say so aloud, but they feel, some of them, that the real villain of the 1930's is the man or woman who saves too much from salary or income.

So far no such slogans as "Saving Is Sinful" have gone out, but don't be surprised if this theme begins to startle your eardrums.

* * * *

New Dealers think that excessive saving is a two-edged sin, because it creates too much capital, for one thing, causing an unhealthy glut, and because it withholds money that might be spent on what men could produce and be paid for. (It hurts, they say, both the capitalists and the workers.) So it's both a venial and a mortal sin.

* * * *

There may be something in what they say. A Government that thinks it's providing for your old age might well be resentful if you insisted skeptically on saving for your old age, too.

But this frown hurts the housewife who slips four bits into a molasses pitcher on the top cupboard of the pantry, or a frugal gent who socks $7.50 into savings each week.

It's going to be hard to convince any of us who were taught (nay, forced) to put a dime a week into the little china pig to think of saving as anything but virtuous.

"—one vote against 361"

It begins to look as if the Constitution and the Declaration will not be taken to the New York Fair to be displayed not far from Magna Charta.

After all, the British have four copies of Magna Charta, and if one were lost, they'd still be O. K. But if anything happened to our Constitution it might leave the Supreme Court high and dry, with nothing to interpret.

And the Declaration, so says the Hon. Sol Bloom, who looked into it, is in a fragile state, almost illegible.

PAJAMA PORTRAIT
"No-Man" Costello

So far as the oldest inhabitant of Capitol Hill can remember, there has never been such a vote as the 360 to 1 vote on a pension bill ($18,000,000) recently. The one vote against the bill was cast by handsome, stocky, graying John Martin Costello, who represents the land of yes-men, Hollywood, but is himself obviously a no-man. He is only 36, and so was only 15 years old when the war ended. He was something of a child prodigy, with B. A., M. A. and LL. B. degrees before he was 21; had to wait a year to be admitted to the bar. He is one of Capitol Hill's most eligible bachelors. By no means opposed to veterans benefits as a rule, he explained his solitary vote in a dispassionate "one-minute" speech of 1,382 words, arguing for more money for wounded vets and less for widows who married 'em 20 years after the war. He says his mail has jumped heavily, with voters divided about 50-50 on his defiance of the whole House.

* * * *

There's such a shortage of gray top-hats in the Capital for the royal garden party at the British Embassy that some men are wondering seriously if they can paint their black hats gray—or go bareheaded . . . In his Texas radio talks young Elliott Roosevelt has taken his father to task (in a filial way) about Argentine canned beef. Elliott thinks the Argentines misinformed his Dad during his 1936 visit to Buenos Aires . . . But the President claims a first-hand acquaintance with canned beef; Elliott's is with beef producers.

Senate Votes Railroad Relief Bill

Restricts House-Passed Reorganizing Plan to B. & O. and Lehigh

The Senate yesterday unanimously approved its third major relief measure in three days—a House-passed voluntary rail reorganization bill, narrowly restricted in the scope by Senate amendments.

Accepted without extensive debate after Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, termed it an "emergency" measure, the bill would permit the Baltimore & Ohio and the Lehigh Valley to proceed with debt-adjustment plans involving postponement of maturity dates.

Fourth Bill Pending

In its original House form the bill would have extended the same permission to all carriers not now in bankruptcy, but the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee imposed qualifications limiting it in effect to two roads.

Action followed Senate approval Saturday of a five-man reorganization court to pass on railroad capital adjustment and reorganization plans, undertaken under the bankruptcy laws. Previously the Senate approved the omnibus Wheeler-Truman transportation bill, codifying the interstate commerce act and bringing water carriers under the Interstate Commerce Commission. A fourth bill, removing the Government's present land grant rate privileges over land-grant roads, is still pending before the Senate committee.

Limitation of debt adjustment permission to the Baltimore & Ohio and the Lehigh Valley in the measure passed yesterday was effected by providing that only roads that had taken preliminary steps before the Interstate Commerce Commission by April 1 be allowed to go ahead.

Hearings on Fairness

If the bill becomes law, the two roads will be allowed to proceed to adjust and postpone their debts with the consent of 75 per cent of their creditors, without a resort to bankruptcy proceedings. In each case, a three-judge Federal court would hold hearings and pass on the fairness of the voluntary reorganization plans.

The bill carries a number of procedural restrictions which Wheeler said are designed to safeguard security holders in case the courts decide the plans approved by the I. C. C. must be modified. No debt adjustment plan could be approved unless voting rights were found to be compatible with interests of creditors, stockholders and "public policy." The courts would be required to investigate fees paid, expenses incurred and propriety of means used to effectuate the plans.

Presentation of the measure to the Senate followed a personal appeal to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee by President Daniel Willard, of the Baltimore & Ohio.

'Dark Horse' Forecast for Ordway's Job

None of Prominent Posibilities Believed Willing to Accept speculating yesterday on a successor to Republican Civil Service Commissioner Samuel H. Ordway, jr., who will resign on June 1, declared that the job would probably go to a "dark horse" nominee.

Their reasoning was that those prominently mentioned for the job would probably not accept.

Obvious possibilities are Luther H. Gulick, Columbia University professor and member of the Brownlow Governmental Reorganization Committee; Leonard E. White, former commissioner and Chicago University professor; William H. McReynolds, administrative assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury; and Frederick M. Davenport, head of the Council of Personnel Administration.

Gulick, busy with a number of administrative and Governmental organizations and still deeply concerned with Federal reorganization, is not believed willing to come to Washington in a full-time position. Davenport is known to consider his present position more desirable than a commissionship. McReynolds has previously indicated his unwillingness to give up a permanent career job for a political appointment, and White, who resigned from the commission in 1937 when he considered his usefulness there at an end, has not reconsidered his decision.

Other Republicans in the dark horse category who are being discussed are Emery Olson, chairman of the Los Angeles municipal civil service commission and professor of public administration at the University of Southern California; Charles P. Messig, chief examiner and secretary of the New Jersey commission; Kenneth Vipond, encyclopedic-minded assistant rhief examiner of the Federal commission; Arthur S. Flemming, director of American University's School of Public Affairs, and William Brownrigg, recently appointed Justice Department personnel director.

NLRB to Let Employers Call Election

Madden Promises Action Soon, to Meet Criticisms

By the Associated Press.

The House Labor Committee was informed yesterday that the National Labor Board would amend its regulations soon to give employers the right to ask for a collective bargaining election under some circumstances.

Board Chairman J. Warren Madden testified in many cases "there is no very valid reason" why employers should not have that privilege, which is now limited to unions and workers.

Like Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, author of the labor act, Madden said the board had the power to permit such procedure but, without safeguards, "it would do no good and would do much harm."

"If you have that authority, don't you think it would allay some of the criticism of the board?" Representative Thomas (Democrat), of Texas, asked.

Asks Early Action

"It would have some of that effect," Madden replied. "I haven't the slightest doubt but that the board will make a change in that direction, but as long as the hearings are going on we thought we should get the benefit of thetestimony of witnesses and the advice of you Congressmen as to what you think would be desirable."

"Why don't you do the job next week and get it over with?" Thomas asked.

The board has taken the position that "if an employer wants to interfere with unions, one of the most effective ways would be to bring up the question of whether the union has a majority at a time when the union obviously doesn't have a majority—maybe at a titme when it has an organization campaign started," Walker said.

Accuses Board of Bias

Former Gov. Charles H. Martin of Oregon told the committee his State had "suffered terribly" from C. I. O. and A. F. of L. disputes and from "the bias of the Labor Relations Board."

He asserted that every time Charles W. Hope, regional director for the Labor Board, came into the State he "left a trail of hell behind him.

"This labor movement has been captured by gangsters and racketeers who have abused the noble purpose for which the labor law was passed," he said.

Supreme Court Allows N. Y. to Tax in Denver

Lawyers Believe Two Rulings May Affect Col. Green's Millions

By the Associated Press.

Dividing sharply in its opinions, the Supreme Court ruled yesterday that a State's taxing power does not always end at its boundaries.

The tribunal held by a 5-to-4 vote that New York could collect an inheritance tax on a $265,767 trust fund held by the Denver National Bank for Mrs. Katherine H. Brown, who was a resident of New York at her death in 1931. Colorado already has collected a $15,653 transfer tax.

In another 5-to-4 split, the court ruled that Alabama could levy death taxes on an Alabama trust fund which was part of the estate of Mrs. Grace C. Scales, a resident of Nashville, Tenn., when she died in 1936. The trust was held by the Title Guarantee Loan and Trust Co. of Birmingham.

McReynolds Dissents

State lines were involved also in a suit in which the Justices ruled, 8 to 1, that Newark, N. J., could levy a personal property assessment on the capital stock of insurance companies incorporated in New Jersey but maintaining operating headquarters in New York.

Two opinions were delivered in the New Jersey case, eight Justices concurring in the result but dividing evenly on the method of reasoning. Justice McReynolds dissented.

The court ruled in another case that Elizabeth Elg, of Mount Kisco, N. Y., a native of Brooklyn, retained her United States citizenship despite residence abroad from her fourth to her twenty-second year.

Chief Justice Hughes wrote the decision upholding a ruling by the United States District Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. Justice Douglas did not participate.

Hughes' First Dissent

Secretary of Labor Perkins contended that Miss Elg was an alien because her father returned to Sweden and relinguished his American citizenship while his daughter was a minor. The citizenship had been obtained by naturalization.

Justice Stone wrote both inheritance tax opinions. He was joined by Justices Black, Green, Frankfurter and Douglas.

Chief Justice Hughes wrote the dissent in the New York-Colorado case. With him were Justices McReynolds, Roberts and Butler, who wrote the Alabama-Tennessee dissent. It was the first dissenting opinion by Hughes in over two years.

Stone said in the New York case that the court "cannot say that the legal interest of decedent in the intangibles (securities) held in trust in Colorado was so dissassociated from her person as to be beyond the taxing jurisdiction of the State of her domicile . . ."

May Affect Col. Green

In the Alabama-Tennessee suit, the Tennessee Supreme Court had ruled that Tennessee could collect taxes on that part of Mrs. Scales' estate held in Alabama, but that Alabama could not. Overruling this, the high tribunal said:

"We can find nothing in the history of the fourteenth amendment and no support in reason, principle, or authority for saying that it prohibits either State, in the circumstances of this case, from laying the tax. On the contrary this court, in sustaining the tax at the place of domicile in a case like the present, has declared that both the decedents' domicile and that of the trustee are free to tax."

This case immediately aroused interest because of the possible effect it might have on the $36,137,335 estate of Col. Edward H. R. Green.

New York May Tax Too

Massachusetts, New York, Florida and Texas contend for the right to tax the Green estate. The first issue—Green's legal domicile—was decided in favor of Massachusetts by the Supreme Court on March 13.

One lawyer familiar with the case said he regarded yesterday's decision as opening the way for New York to attempt imposition of transfer taxes on about $30,000,000 of securities held in that State, while at the same time Massachusetts might endeavor to levy on them despite their being held in New York.

The court will wind up its work for this session next Monday and recess for the summer.

Pennsylvania Sit-Down Ban Voted

Legislature Sends State Labor Act Changes to Governor

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 29.—A bill setting up sharply defined limits within which employes and labor groups can carry on union activity in Pennsylvania was passed by the Legislature.

Sit-down strikes would be outlawed as "an unfair labor practice" and "an illegal act."

The measure, making extensive revisions in the State labor relations act passed during the preceding Democratic administration, was sent to Republican Gov. James for his signature.

Employers are given the right to petition the State labor board for a collective bargaining election, under the measure.

Check-Off Restricted

The "check-off" of union dues—a clause contained in many labor contracts—is prohibted unless authorized by a secret, majority vote of the employes and written individual authorization from each employe.

"The State labor act now is really a criminal code," protested James L. McDevitt, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor (A. F. of L.). "The new bill just about nullifies the labor relations act," he said.

Patrick T. Fagan, a district president of the United Mine Workers (C. I. O.) and a member of the State board that administers the labor act, declared: "Labor would be better off if the entire (labor relations) act were repealed."

But Senator Weldon Heyburn, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, asserted "this measure is a long step toward recovery. Employers should have the same breaks as employes."

Spokesmen for industry claimed at hearings the old act, drawn up along lines of the national labor relations act was "one-sided."

One clause in the revised act would prohibit any member of the State labor relations board from engaging in any business or political activity and from serving as an officer of any labor organization.

Intimidation Forbidden

In addition to participation in sit-down strikes, the measure declared it an "unfair labor practice" for an employe or a union or its officers:

"To intimidate, restrain or coerce any employe by threats of force or violence or harm . . . with the intent of compelling such employe to join or to refrain from joining any labor organization.

"To intimidate, restrain or coerce any employer by threats of violence or harm to the person of said employer . . . with the intent of compelling the employer to accede to demands, conditions and terms of employment."

Treasury Bid OnHOLC Bond Partial Success

Exchange Refused On 212 Millions In Securities

The Treasury's offer to exchange 1½ per cent 6-8 year bonds for $900,000,000 of Home Owners' Loan Corporation bonds called for redemption August 1 resulted in only partial success yesterday, due, officials said, to the large number of small holdings of the old bonds.

Holders of $687,767,025 of the maturing bonds, which bear 2¾ per cent, turned them in for the new bonds, leaving about $212,000,000 of the old bonds which will have to be paid off in cash August 1.

It was not the first time that difficulty has been experienced in a conversion offering for HOLC bonds. Officials explained that the bonds were originally issued to a large number of small individual investors. Presumably, it was said, these holders did not know about the conversion, were unfamiliar with the necessary steps to take advantage of it, or felt that the new interes rate was unattractive.

As a result of the public response, the Treasury agreed to buy for Government trust accounts which it manages not more than $100,000,000 of the new securities. The HOLC will have to pay off the rest out of its sinking fund.

A drain on available Treasury cash for deficit outlays will be an inevitable consequence. This will have to be made up by new borrowing.

The fact that the new bonds were selling at a premium showed that the Treasury had been successful in pricing them properly.

Morris Assails 'Double Taxes' On Mergers

Bar Spokesman Asks Committee to Protect Reorganizing Profits

By the Associated Press.

The House Ways and Means Committee jogged along yesterday toward the Congressional goal of revising corporate taxes by July 1.

At a brief hearing, the committee heard appeals for a clarification of tax laws governing business mergers and for a removal of what were termed "indirect restrictions" on corporations engaged in foreign trade.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, expressed hope that the committee could wind up the hearings this week or early next. Thereafter, the committee is not expected to take long in presenting to the House a revision measure, including repeal of the last remnant of the undistributed profits tax.

These revisions, under present plans, will be tied to a measure reenacting so-called "nuisance taxes," which expire June 30 and, therefore, require immediate action unless the Treasury is to lose millions in revenue.

George M. Morris, of Washington, chairman of the American Bar Association's finance committee, proposed elimination of what he said was double taxation on the profits of mergers, asserting that a recent Supreme Court decision causes the internal revenue commissioner to tax the profits realized by both an absorbed company and its stockholders. He suggested such levies might diminish the number of reorganizations and, therefore, decrease the total Government tax return from mergers.

Baker Describes Reorganization Plans' 'Joker'

The so-called "joker" in the reorganization order, which some experts contend would prevent salary increases or promotions during the fiscal year beginning July 1 for Federal employes in the shifted agencies, was discussed through Radio Station WOL last night by Jacob Baker, president, united Federal Workers of America.

"The reorganization act provides that as to agencies transferred under the President's reorganization orders, there shall be no change in classification or compensation of any position during the fiscal year of the transfer. The purpose of this was to prevent any functioning agencies being upset immediately after reorganization without full consideration," Baker explained.

"If this bill, now in the House, passes," he said, "it will mean that none of these people can have a raise, a promotion or a reclassification for one year from July 1."

Support Sought in House for Move To Avoid Vote on Townsend Bill

House Majority Leader Rayburn announced yesterday the Townsend old-age pension plan would be debated in the House tomorrow and voted on Thursday.

RAYBURN

The initial test on the proposal will come Wednesday when the House acts on a "gag" rule, barring amendments to the Townsend plan, as incorporated in the bill by Representative Hendricks (Democrat), of Florida.

Four hours of general debate will be allowed, one hour each for Republican and Democratic opponents and proponents.

Many members who do not want to go on record for or against the proposal are seeking to muster sufficient support to send the Hendricks bill back to the Ways and Means Committee. This is the only loophole the Democratic leadership left to bar a "yes" and "no" vote.

President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday to appropriate an additional $218,856 for the next fiscal ye ar for the State Department.

Attached to the President's request was a letter from the budget bureau stating that Australia may establish a legation here in 1940 and the United States to reciprocate, would be required to set up a legation in Australia. A $7,500 item for this was suggested.

Also included was $100,000 for expenses of a commission created to settle disputes with Mexico over expropriation of American-owned farm lands by the Mexican government.

In solemn silence the Senate yesterday listened to eulogies for two deceased Senators—Royal S. Copeland, of New York, and James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, Democrats.

A bouquet of red and white roses draped the desk once occupied by the late Senator "Jim Ham" Lewis, while a large bouquet of deep red roses adorned the desk used for many years by Senator Copeland.

In the gallery, Mrs. Copeland, widow of the late New York solon, listened intently as the Memorial servcies were conducted. Resolutions of condolence were adopted at the outset.

Glowing tributes to the career of Senator Copeland were delivered by Wagner, Vandenberg and Mead, while Lucas and Slattery extolled the record of Senator Lewis.

Georgetown U. Speakers Laud Ancient Science

Modern Investigation Has No Philosophy, Meeting Is Told

Bitter condemnation of modern ideas and pleas for a return to the principles of medieval thinking were voiced by speakers in the College of Arts and Sciences program yesterday at Georgetown University, first of a series of academic exercises commemorating the university's 150th anniversary.

Declaring that by no aspect of modern culture had man's happiness been increased, Dr. Piritim A. Sorokin, chairman of the department of sociology at Harvard University, called the twentieth century "the bloodiest century out of 25 centuries studied."

Our "sexually crazy and often sadistic" contemporary art "mortalizes the immortals," he said at a meeting last night in Gaston Hall.

Science Lacks Philosophy

At the morning session in Copley Lounge, the Rev. Frederick W. Sohon, S. J., head of the mathematics department at Georgetown, said that modern sciences had failed because they had "no real philosophy." Only by a return to the principles of medieval thinking, accepting the reality of universal ideas, can modern science achieve a stable existence, he said.

Dr. Francis I. Brady, of Georgetown, attempted to demonstrate the validity of Father Sohon's proposals by illustrating from scientific experiments. "I have solved no problem," he concluded. "I have tried to indicate that solutions may be found if we proceed as Father Sohon has proposed, without presumption or despair, with patience and hope and with vast humility before the fact."

Culture Was Based on God

"Modern culture concentrates on the testimony of the senses, Dr. Sorokin said at the evening meeting, whereas medieval culture had been based on the "true reality and the supreme value of God, supersensory, superrational, infinite and absolue in all respects.

Unless we return to the medieval philosophy, in which man's nature was unity, said Dr. Sorokin, we cannot achieve peace of mind and happiness among men nor stop the "widespread cruelties among governments."

Other speakers on yesterday's program were the Rev. John J. Toohey, William C. Flaherty, the Rev. Charles J. Foley, Daniel O'C. McFadden, the Rev. John S. Creaghan, the Rev. Bernard M. Wagner, the Rev. Leon E. Destert, Stephen McNamee, the Rev. Arthur A. Coniff, Richard J. Weber and Andrew J. Kress.. The Rev. John E. Grattan, dean of the college of arts and sciences, presided.

Visiting and local sociologists attending the celebrations were guests of the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Sociological Society at a dinner last night in Maguire Hall. Dr. J. T. Woofter, president of the chapter and WPA coordinator of local relief, presided.

Dr. Sorokin Speaks

Dr. Sorokin addressed the dinner briefly, after being introduced by the Rev. Dr. Stephen F. McName, S. J. The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of the university, also spoke. Others at the dinner included Dr. Carl Taylor, Dr. E. O. Baker, Dr. John Donaldson, Dr. Ruth Reed, Dr. Percy Robert, Dr. and Mrs. Maurice Parmelee, Maj. Gilbert S. Decker, Mrs. Hugh Brinton and Dr. Carl Wells.

Dr. Andrew J. Kress, head of the department of sociology at the university, was in charge of the dinner, and the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown, introduced Dr. orokin at the meeting in Gaston Hall.

Citizens Defend Rep. Randolph

Southeast Washington is behind him."

"We don't want to see him go. I feel that there has been some hasty judgment, and I am confident in view of the man's record that he was justified in any position he took in regard to the milk investigation.

Asks Careful ifting of Case

"Knowing the man, I am confident that a careful sifting of the case will show it in a different light from what circumstantial evidence warrants."

In the same vein was the reaction of Mrs. Olive Faircloth, secretary of the Women's Bar Association, who expressed herself as "quite surprised, particularly as Mr. Randolph has evidently been sincere in his efforts to help the District."

She added, however, that there was "no question of the need for suffrage."

Many Decline Comment

Many civic leaders, including Sefton Darr, president of the District Bar Association; David Babp, secretary of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, and many others, declined to comment.

Many said they had not sufficient time to study the reasons for Randolph's reisgnation. Darr observed that he "wouldn't like to express an opinion as I am appearing before the committee in the milk investigation."

Revelations that Randolph had interceded for representatives of an asphalt company in District paving specifications were a development of the milk inquiry.

Citizen demands for self-government were almost universal, though many refused to view the present situation as a reason for re-emphasizing these demands."

Barby, LaRoe Ask Vote

Included in this category were Dr. Mervin, Dr. Willia mL. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, and Wilbur LaRoe, chairman of the federation's civic affairs committee. Both LaRoe and Barby said they were "strongly" for sufferage. Dr. Marvin said he believed the District should have national representation, but not local sufferage.

Text of Letters On Paving Deal

Warden discussed with Mr. McCoach.

The pertinent code provisions are Sections 71 and 73 of Chapter 3 in Title 12. Section 71 provides "When any repairs of streets, avenues, alleys, or sewers within the District of Columbia are to be made, or when new pavements are to be substituted in place of those worn out, new ones laid, or new streets opened, sewers built, or any works the total cost of which shall exceed the sum of $1,000, notice shall be given in one newspaper in Washington, and if the total cost shall exceed $5,000, then in one newspaper in each of the cities of New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore also for one week, for proposals with full specifications as to material for the whole or any portion of the works proposed to be done; and the lowest responsible proposal for the kind and character of pavement or other work which the Commissioners shall determine upon shall in all cases be accepted; Provided, however, that the Commissioners shall have the right, in their discretion, to reject all such proposals . . ." Section 73 contains the following pertinent language, "No pavements shall be accepted nor any povements laid except that of the best material of its kind known for that purpose. laid in the most substantial manner; . . ."

These two Code provisions clearly indicate to my mind that the Commissioners have the power to ask for competitive bids upon any particular kind of type of paving material as differentiated from other types or kinds of paving material in the same general classification. In other words, pursuant to this statute, provisions can and shall be drafted or the present specifications amended to provide for lake asphalt separate and apart from petroleum asphalt because these two products are recognized as totally different kinds of asphalt paving material by which recognized authorities as the Federal Bureau of Public Roads. The same also applies in the standard specifications for the District of Columbia. Your attention is directed to Section 80, Title 12 of the Code wherein language includes or refers to different materials such as "sheet asphalt," "asphalt block," "asphaltic or bituminous macadam," etc. Upon submission of bids on either of these materials the Commissioners have the right under this statute to choose as they please between pavements constructed of petroleum or oil asphalt and pavements constructed of lake asphalt. The difference in initial cost between lake asphalt and oil asphalt is not a problem of competitive bidding because the bids are on different kinds and types of materials which are recognized by both specifications and statutes in the District of Columbia. Competitive bids would be asked upon lake asphalt or upon oil asphalt.

I refer again to Section 71 which gives the Commissioners discretionary power to reject all proposals. Impliedly this would give them the right to accept higher priced materials than those of the same kind and character without competitive bidding. This may not be a desirable policy, of course, but it demonstrates the broad power vested in the Commissioners.

Curiously enough the statute then argues in favor of lake asphalt. Section 73, as quoted above, provides that no pavement shall be accepted and no pavement laid except that of the best material known for that purpose. You will recall that both Col. McCoach and Capt. Whitehurst readily agreed that lake asphalt is the best available in this country. Your attention is also directed to the fact that many years ago probably more sheet asphalt (using lake asphalt) paving was laid on the streets of the city of Washington than any city of corresponding size in the country. These streets stand today as monuments to the quality of this product. As "test stretches" or "demonstrations" they prove beyond all argument that lake asphalt is better than oil asphalt in standing the inroads of time, weather and modern traffic. In the light of the language of the code without reference to the standard specifications at this time, it is clear that the difference between oil or petroleum asphalt and lake asphalt is recognized and that the Congress of the United States in Section 73 had made a very important declaration of policy as to the type and character of paving materials to be used in the District of Columbia.

Turning from the code to the standard specifications of the District of Columbia, it seems increasingly clearer that the difference between oil asphalt and lake asphalt is recognized. All of the standard specifications and requirements of the department of highways must be interpreted in the light of the above quote code provisions and discretionary power of the Commissioners to choose the materials is contined in section 73. There is no question in my mind but what the Commissioners can now accept competitive bids upon lake asphalt without having to compare the prices of lake asphalt and oil asphalt. The specifications and code provisions read together—subject to the exception which I shall hereafter point out—do not create any basis for competitive proposals between these two kinds of asphalt material.

The exception to which I refer is contained in paragraph 242 Subtitle (a) on page 136 of the Standard Specifications for Pavements of the District of Columbia, Department of Highways, dated 1939, covering construction methods of Bituminous Surface Course C. M.-A. and C./M.-B. Said Section 242 refers to materials and reads as follows insofar as it concerns and affects the subject of this letter: "Materials for this work shall conform to the following requirements (a). Asphalt cement shall be Grade Ap-3, conforming to the requirements of Paragraph 86." The language of subsection (a) in effect closes the requirements for asphaltic materials to all asphalt other than oil or petroleum asphalt. This specification cannot prevail under the code. It nevertheless appears to be in conflict with both the express provisions of the staute and the declarations of policy contained therein. In order that there may be a fair approach to this matter in keeping with the spirit of the District of Columbia law, this specification should be altered to provide for bids upon lake asphalt by substituting lake asphalt for oil asphalt." The symbols of lake asphalt would probably be AT-3 and can be inserted in the said specifications in place of the present symbols contained therein, to-wit: AP-3 which refer to oil asphalt. This suggested change in the specifications is not only in conformity with the statute but is based upon admissions and statements of Col. McCoach and Capt. Whitehurst. It is also based upon experiences of many cities including Washington, D. C., more recently the city of Baltimore, Md., Chicago, Detroit, Richmond and Buffalo. The State of Michigan through its State highway department has adopted lake asphalt as the best material for paving its roads upon the basis of efficiency and long range economy.

I again remind you that in answer to one of your questions, Capt. Whitehurst and Col. McCoach agreed that the difference in the initial costs of the two kinds of asphalt paving material would be overcome in favor of lake asphalt over a period of time because of the increased efficiency and durability of streets paved with lake asphalt materials. I understand that some question wasraised during your conference idicating that there may possibly be some Federal statute or probably an appropriation bill which requires "competitive bidding." Such statute, if it exists, in the light of the above quoted code provisions and the recognized difference between oil asphalt and lake asphalt as different materials, would not have any effect whatsoever upon the question of competitive bidding. There can be no competitive bidding between these different kinds of asphalt paving material, the two types being recognized as being as distinctly different as bituminous macadam and concrete mix. They are asphalts of distinct types and values. If you can find a Federal statute or some specific act which provides for competitive bidding, you will no doubt find that it does not require competitive bidding between these two distinct types of asphalt. I would like you to assertain if you possibly can, whether ar not there is any such act, and obtain if possibly an opinion from some recognized legal authority of the District of Columbia competent to render such an opinion regarding the effect of such statute upon proposals for asphalt paving. I am confident that such a statute or any competent interpretation thereof will agree with the conclusions reached in this letter.

I am submitting this letter to you as counsel for the gentlemen who were so kindly conducted by you to Colonel McCoach's office. They appreciate your great interest and splendid cooperation and wish me to sincerely thank you for arranging the appointments for them and for giving them so much help. I shall be deepiy grateful for any further assistnce you may give ahem or to me personnally.

Sincerely yours.
D. GROVE MOLER.
April 28, 1939.

Honorable Jennings Randolph,
Chairman,
District of Columbia Committee
House of Representatives,
ashington, D. C.
My dear Jennings:

NUnder date of April 20th, 1939, I addressed to you a letter concerning the District Code provisions and the Standard Specifications relating to paving material in the District of Columbia. I submit this as a supplemental letter and request you to use it in connection with my said original letter.

H. R. 5610, the District of Columbia appropriation bill, now pending before the Committee on Appropriations in the Senate, contains on page 82 of the printed copy available at the document room, line 11 to 16 inclusive, the following language, "No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be available for repairing, resurfacing, or paving any street, avenue, or roadway by private contract unless the specifications for such work shall be prepared as to permit of fair and open competition in paving material as well as in price." This provision does not modify or change the conclusions which I reached in my original letter, to-wit, that bids can lawfully, and following the declaration of policy in Sec. 73, Title 12, of the District Code should be asked upon lake asphalt as differentiated from oil or petroleum asphalt, inasmuch as they are asphalts of distinct types and values. It rather is statutory recognition of both the conclusions and reasoning contained in said letter.

No one can justly argue that specifications should not provide for "fair and open competition in paving material as well as in price."

The words "fair and open" as herein used can only mean fair and open opportunity to ane and all to bid. But upon what? Paving material of a distinct type to be selected by the Commissioners in accordance with powers conferred upon them by the District Code and pursuant to the declaration of policy in said Section 73 that the best known paving materials for the particular purpose shall be used. There is no other reasonable interpretation. Certainly this provision in the appropriation bill does not curtail the statutory powers of the Commissioners to select the type of paving material desired. It cannot mean that there shall be competitive bidding upon concrete mix as against lake asphalt or any other distinct type of paving material. Such an interpretation is absurd and unsound both in reasoning and result.

Your attention is particularly invited to the fact that the language in this appropriation bill is mandatory as to the manner in which the specifications shall be prepared. Therefore, subtitle (a) on page 136 of the Standard Specifications (which is fully discussed on page 3 of my original letter to you) in providing that "(a) Asphalt cement shall be grade AP-3" (oil asphalt) is in direct conflict therewith. In construing said appropriation bill and the applicable code provisions together the admitted best known material for the purpose, to-wit, lake asphalt (AT 3) might be substituted in said subtitle (a) of the Standard Specifications for the symbols "AP-3" (oil asphalt) but certainly it cannot be excluded in favor of oil asphalt without conflicting with the higher statutory authority of both the code provisions and said appropriation bill.

May I reiterate my position that the District Commissioners have the power at the present time to ask for competitive bids upon lake asphalt.

Thanking you, once again,
Sincerely yours,
D. GROVE MOLER.
May 2, 1939.

To Col. David McCoach, Jr.,
Commissioner for the District.
My dear Col. McCoach:

Following up my visit to your office a few days ago in company with Mr. Warden and Mr. Summerville, let me say I inclose two letters received from my former secretary, D. Grove Moler, of Martinsburg, who is in contact with the situation which we discussed.

I wish you would go through the material carefully and return this correspondence for my files. I shall appreciate your comment on the same.

I trust something favorable can be worked out for this company.

With kindest regards, I am
Sincerely yours,
JENNINGS RANDOLPH.

May 6, 1939.

To Honorable Jennings Randolph,
Chairman of the House District Committee.
My dear Mr. Randolph:

I have your letter of May 2 together with enclosure of letters from Mr. D. Grove Moler, of Martinsburg, W. Va., date Apr. 20 and Apr. 28, concerning the District of olumbia specifications for paving.

I have considered carefully the legal phase of this question which is so ably discussed in Mr. Moler's letter. It is my opinion that the Commissioners have full authority to select the type of pavement necessary under any given conditions, also they have full authority to specify the characteristics of the materials entering into the type of pavement selected. However, I am firmly convinced that they have no authority to limit the materials to one make or manufacture, particularly where only one source of supply is available unless it can be proved that such material is decidedly superior to all others beyond peradventure of doubt. Experience in the District of Columbia and, I am informed elsewhere, does not warrant such a conclusion of superiority of lake asphalt ofer oil asphalt, or vice versa. I regret, therefor, to advise you that it is not possible to specify the use of lake asphalt to the exclusion of oil asphalt for paving in the District of Columbia.

The asphalt table on page 43 of the District standard paving specifications provides for both petroleum and natural asphalt in the lower penetration group. These tables are a compilation from Federal specification SE-A-706. There is no Federal specification for Trinidad asphalt in the A3 group. Likewise the standard specifications for highway materials and method of sampling and testing of the American Association of State Hihgway Officials do not carry Trinidad asphalt in the A3 group. Whether this particular asphalt has been marketed commercially in the higher penetration group or not I do not know, but before its use could be authorized a specification similar to the Federal specifications and the standards which we follow must be established.

It is the intention of our specifications to permit use of all suitable types of asphalt adaptable to our work on an equal basis, including lake asphalt. I shall be pleased to consider amendments to these specifications regarding the A3 group when and if satisfactory detailed specification for this group of lake asphalt is established. As requested, the enclosures with your letter are returned herewith. Very truly yours D. McCOACH, Jr.

May 16, 1939.

To Cal. David McCoach, jr., Commissioner of the District.

Dear Col. McCoach: I wish to thank you for your kindness in granting so much time for discussion of the business my friends and I had with you in your office on last Thursday morning.

Confirming that conversation, it is my understanding that within a few days, possibly easly as Wednesday of this week, the specification handed you by Mr. Warden will be added to or incorporated in your Stanard Specifica- In the meantime, Capt. Whitehurst tions for the District of Columbia. will have taken it up with the Bureau of Public Roads or other proper Federal experts and no doubt will have found that Mr. Warden's specification in effect is proper for adoption by the District of Columbia.

I also understand Capt. Whitehurst to tell Mr. Warden that the proposal forms would be in the alternative. In other words, the contractor may submit a bid including oil asphalt or bids upon both. This will probably require the preparation of an amended proposal form so that sufficient blank lines will be provided for submission of bids upon both types of asphalt. I merely call this to your attention in order that this item may not be overlooked.

I sincerely hope that in your contacts with the contractors either directly or through Capt. Whitehurst, they will be urged to submit bids upon both propositions in order that we may obtain a fair comparison for our future consideration of this matter.

I trust I will hear from you within the next few days relative to any changes that may be required in the specification offered in order that I may inform my friends of what has been done pursuant to our Thursday conversation.

With kindest personal regards, I am.

JENNINGS RANDOLPH.
May 19, 1939.

To Hon. Jennings Randolph.
Chairman House District Committee.

Dear Mr. Congressman,

I have your letter of May 16 with further reference to the D. C. Standard Specifications for paving.

As stated in my letter of May 6 to you, we have taken the necessary steps to include lake asphalt in th ehigher penetration group the same as it is now included on an equal basis with oil asphalt in the low penetration group. An amendment (copy enclosed) to our standard specifications will be carried in future proposals. No other change in the specifications or bidding procedure is contemplated as this amendment adequately carries out our intentions to issue specifications to permit the use of all suitable types of asphalt adaptable to work on an equal basis.

Your reference to alternate proposals and separate bids on both lake and oil asphalt has been noted. The submission of alternate bids or separate bids for oil and lake asphalt will be unnecessary. Both types of asphalt will be bid on the same basis, the option of which is used resting with the contractor as long as the material furnished complies with the specifications. This is the same procedure heretofore followed with asphaltic pavements requiring lower penetration asphalt (A6 group). The effect of the amendment to the standard specification above referred to will be t allow a similar procedure in pavements requiring a higher penetration asphalt (A3 group).

Very sincerely yours,
COL. DAVID McCOACH, JR.

Chaperau Quits Jail to Testify Against Manton

Confessed Smugler Creates Sensation by Surprise Appearance

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 29.—Albert N. Chaperau, pseudo-diplomat and former convict who served some Hollywood stars as a jewel smuggler, was brought out of prison today to testify against former senior United States Circuit Court Judge Martin T. Manton in Federal Court.

To a surprised jury, Chaperau quoted the alleged boast of George M. Spector, who is accused of being a "contact man" for Manton in the sale of judicial opinions, that he "put over a deal" to fix an electric razor patent infringement case in Manton's court.

He also testified that in June of 1937, when Spector was going to Europe to dispose of foreign rights to the patent, Spector displayed a letter of introduction to a man in England written on circuit court stationery and signed with Manton's name.

A Federal accounting expert had traced at least $7,248.89 from the company manufacturing the electric razor into Manton's personal bank account.

Following Chaperau, Almon B. Hall, Connecticut poultryman, testified that $75,000 once was quoted to him as the price for a favorable decision in litigation pending against him in Manton's court.

With the completion of Hall's testimony tomorrow United States attorneys said, the Government probably would rest its case against Manton and Spector, who are accused of conspiracy to obstruct justice. Two other co-defendants have pleaded guilty.

The appearance of Chaperau caused a sensation in the court. As the result of his smuggling Comedians Jack Benny and George Burns were fined $10,000 and $8,000, respectively, and Mrs. Edgar J. Lauer, wife of a New York State Supreme Court justice, was sentenced to three months in prison and fined $2,500. All three were accused of having Chaperau smuggle Parisian jewelry and clothing for them.

Wood Preservatives Now Repel Insects

There are some new wood preservatives on the market which may be brushed or sprayed on wood or in which wood may be dipped. Some of these preservatives are moisture repellant as well as toxic so that insect attacks are discouraged. Fungus or bacterial growths which cause wood to decay are prevented.

At least one of these products, which was primarily intended for marine use, is made of metallic salts in a liquid vehicle. These, when penetrated into the wood, are insoluble in salt or fresh water and they are non-volatile.

and other District Committee members for $1,000 fee.

"After the milk investigation is completed and the report is filed in the House," said Randolph, "I am going to give serious consideration to retiring from the District Committee."

He explained that the task of being Washington's "mayor" was a thankless one with many "headaches." Henceforth, he added, he wanted to devote his attention more largely to his own West Virginia district.

Other rapid-fire developments on Capitol Hill which followed the announcements of Randolph's forthcoming resignation as "mayor" of Washington were:

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, who has taken the lead in demanding that Washington's milkshed be opened to western producers, appeared to be in line for the District Committee chairmanship.

Several additional resignations from the District Committee were forecast on Capitol Hill, one member predicting that the committee would be dissolved before the end of the session.

Attorney General Frank Murphy rejected flatly the request of the House District Committee that the Federal Bureau of Investigation take a hand in the milk investigation.

Dictographs in House Denied

Chairman Bates, of the House sub-committee on public health, denied that any dictographs had been used in the House Office Building as Kenneth Romney, House sergeant-at-arms, said an investigation is being made.

The correspondence over the asphalt specifications, as released by Commissioner McCoach, included six letters, two of which were written by Moler.

McCoach also stated that Randolph had called at his office on two occasions in connection with the asphalt request. On both occasions he was accompanied by Messrs. Warden and Somerville, who were said to be representatives of the Barber Asphalt Corporation.

Moler Attends Conference

Moler attended the second conference, while Capt. Whitehurst sat in with McCoach on both parleys.

Last night McCoach said he understood Randolph to introduce Warden and Somerville as his constituents. He said he saw no evidence at the time that the procedure was not perfectly normal, but District officials could not recall when a similar request had been made to them by a member of Congress.

Randolph, Warden and Somerville first called on McCoach on April 19. The first letter in the case was dated April 20 and was on the letterhead of "Faulkner & Moler," of Martinsburg, W. Va. Addressed to Representative Randolph, the letter presented a legal explanation of the problem and offered a justification for the change.

After explaining that the Commissioners are now required by law to accept the lowest bid on paving contracts, Moler argued that natural asphalt might be so interpreted as not being a competitor of "oil" asphalt and so be required without violation of the law.

Comparative Bids

"There is no question in my mind," he wrote, "but what the Commissioners can now accept comparative bids upon lake asphalt without having to compare the prices of lake asphalt and oil asphalt.

"The specifications and code provisions read together, subject to the exception which I shall hereafter point out, do not create any basis for competitive proposals between these two kinds of asphalt material."

District officials explained that natural asphalt is called "lake" asphalt because it is mined only in a lake in Trinidad.

Moler stated in the same letter that Capt. Whitehurst and Col. McCoach had stated in answer to a question, that "the difference in the initial costs of the two kinds of asphalt paving material would be overcome in favor of lake asphalt over a period of time because of the increased efficiency and durability of streets paved with lake asphalt materials."

Statement Not Recalled

Col. McCoach, in a subsequent letter to Randolph, denied the statement.

Moler concluded this letter with a letter of thanks to Randolph. He said he was acting as counsel "for the gentlemen who were so kindly conducted by you to Col. McCoach's office. They appreciate your great interest and splendid co-operation," he added, "and wish me to sincerely thank you for arranging the appointments for them and for giving them so much help."

Pendergast In Prison; Fraud Case Reopened

Leavenworth Doors Close on Kansas City Boss and an Aide

By the Associated Press.

Leavenworth, Kans., May 29. — Prison doors closed behind Tom Pendergast and R. Emmet O'Malley today simultaneously with a burst of new action in the notorious Missouri fire insurance compromise which caused the downfall of the Kansas City boss and his henchman.

Pendergast surrendered at the Federal penitentiary this morning to start serving the 15-month term imposed a week ago when he pleaded guilty of dodging income taxes on $443,550 in 1935-1936.

Of that amount he was paid $315,000 for his nod approving a settlement which gave fire insurance companies 80 per cent of excess premiums impounded while a proposed rate increase was in litigation.

Case Reopened

In Kansas City a three-judge Federal court granted a State motion today to reopen the case and ordered criminal actions started against persons "who foisted a fraudulent order on the court" in its approval of the settlement.

Willingness of 137 companies involved to return the money—approximately $8,000,000—to the court, with the possibility it might be returned to policyholders was expressed by their representative, William M. Bullitt, Louisville, Ky., attorney. He said the companies were leaving action "entirely up to the court."

At Jefferson City, Attorney General McKittrick started proceedings in the State Supreme Court to bar the companies concerned from doing further business in Missouri until they repay the $8,000,000 and surrender the proceeds of increased rates granted at the time of the compromise.

O'Malley Got $62,500

As State insurance superintendent appointed at Pendergast's behest, O'Malley approved the insurance compromise and recommended its approval by the Federal court. He pleaded guilty Saturday to evading income taxes on the $62,500 he received through Pendergast for his part in the settlement.

Space Advised In Corner Lots

Every residential lot within a neighborhood should provide free area on all sides of the space to be covered by a dwelling, and because of this, particular attention should be given corner lots. Land-planning officials recommend that corner lots be given extra width at least to the extent of the additional side-yard required by the side-street setback. With a normal side-yard requirement of 5 feet a side-street building-line setback of 15 feet, corner lots should be at least 10 feet wider than interior lots.

The purpose of streets is to afford means of access, fire protection, space for underground utilities, light and air. Local residential streets 40 to 60 feet in width are not wide enough to provide adequately for light and air, and the need for additional open space is recognized by most zoning ordinances and platting regulations.

Regulations establishing minimum building-line setbacks on the front, sides, and rear of dwellings must be considered by the developer or subdivider at the time lot lines are established.

Damp Spots Not All Caused by Leakage

Damp spots frequently appear on the interior surfaces of walls, but, contrary to the impression of some homeowners, only in relatively few cases are they caused by leakage through the walls. Source of the trouble is usually found around window frames which are poorly built or improperly weatherproofed. These frames admit air and moisture, and the adjoining interior walls soon become unsightly with dirt and water stains.

Water, finding its way into the wall around the window frame, may work along inside the wall and make a spot on the plaster surface several feet distant. Because of this, it is sometimes difficult to locate the source of trouble.

Homeowners plagued by this annoyance should repair the windows and then cover the damage already done by a thorough repainting.

Housing Employs 67 Industries

Sixty-seven industries depend upon housing for their existence, according to Secretary of Labor Perkins, who recently discussed housing as a key to re-employment.

If housing construction could be restored to the 1929 level of activity, 2,800,000 would be put back to work directly or indirectly, Miss Perkins declared.

"There are 800,000 fewer workers employed today in building than in 1929. If we could put these men back to work they would automatically carry back 2,000,000 other workers in railroads, factories, mines, and forests," she added.

Streamlined Ironing Board

Manufacturers of kitchen cabinets and equipment are featuring an ironing board compartment with an adjustable ironing board, which fits into the plan of the average streamlined kitchen. When not in use, the board folds away out of sight.

7 Homes Planned

Seven two-story brick dwellings will be constructed for Robert L. Doughton by C. W. Hancock & Sons, in the 2300 block of Nebraska avenue northwest and at 2330 Sherrier place northwest, at a cost of $35,520. R. O. Brannan is the architect.

Coal Bins Inexpensive

to the maximum Federal contribution, $40 monthly benefits will be paid the aged.

The report summarized the tax changes as follows:

"1. The old-age insurance tax has been frozen at 1 per cent on the worker and 1 per cent on the employer for the three years, 1940, 1941 and 1942, as against the 1½ per cent rates on each under the present act. This will save employers and workers about $275,000,000 in 1940, or a total of $825,000,000 in the three years.

"2. Provision is made ro that the States may reduce their unemployment insurance contributions if a certain reserve fund has been attained and minimum benefit standards have been provided. All except about nine States would be able at the present time to take advantage of this change. They may save employers between $200,000,000 and $250,000,000 during 1940.

$65,000,000 Saving

"3. Only the first $3,000 an employer pays an employe for a year is taxed under the unemployment-compensation provisions. This is already the case in old-age insurance. This will save employers about $65,000,000 a year (each year from now on.)

"4. Provision is made for refunds and abatements to employers who paid their 1936, 1937 and 1938 unemployment compensation contributions late to the States. This will save employers about $15,000,000."

On increased benefits, the report said:

"The old-age insurance benefits have been liberalized, benefits provided for aged wives, and for widows, children and aged dependent parents, and the date for beginning monthly payments has been advanced to January 1, 1940. About $1,755,000,000 in benefits is estimated to be disbursed during 1940-44, or about $1,200,000,000 above what is estimated would be spent under existing law during these 5 years.

"The total cost of these benefits over the next 45 years will be about the same as the cost of the present benefits would be during that time."

The report said agricultural and non-profit organization employes were not brought under the law because of a desire to "eliminate the nuisance cases of inconsequential tax payments." However, the bill adds a $1,000,000-a-year increase in Federal grants to States for vocational rehabilitation, bringing the total to $2,938,000.

It explains a board of trustees is created to handle social security funds; that it is authorized to buy Government securities in the open market or new issues and abolishes the special 3 per cent bonds now issued to the credit of the fund.

"No Fundamental Changes"

The report said while the proposed bill makes "no fundamental change in principles or objectives of the Social Security act" the "need for strengthening and liberalizing" the law is apparent.

It cited that by 1980, the United States may have 22,000,000 persons over 65 years old, as against 3,080,000 in 1900 and 8,200,000 in 1930, or 6.3 per cent of the population.

"Recognizing these facts, it is possible to foresee that we shall have a growing number of aged persons for whom some provision must be made," the report said.

It defended the contributory system of benefit payments, and estimated that between 1940-54, inclusive the total benefit payments would equal $14,804,000,000, or $6,315,000,000 in excess of present law.

Already, the report said, 44,000,000 persons have been brought under the social security law and will be eligible for old-age payments, under the insurance provision, of from $10 to $85 a month.

Girl, 12, Wins National 'Bee' By Spelling 'Homogeneity'

Elizabeth Rice, of Auburn, Mass., Downs Field of 20 Opponents In Fifteenth Annual Contest

Twelve-year-old Elizabeth Rice, sun-tanned and serious-faced, of Auburn, Mass., looked high into the air, then very deeply into herself and spelled slowly "homogeneity." She clipped the last letter on with a snap of assurance and became the National hcampion speller in the fifteenth annual spelling bee here yesterday.

Her face then exploded in a big smile. And 13-year-old Humphrey Cook, of Richmond, Va., who reached that last word with Elizabeth and missed, started applauding.

"Canonical," said the pronouncer by way of one last river for Elizabeth to cross and she looked high in the air again, then deeply into herself and spelled "canonical." It was all over but the flashing of the flash bulbs and the placing in the champion's hands of the Louisville Courier-Journal's spelling bee plaque—which was about as big as Elizabeth.

Mildred Kariher, a 14-year-old blonde, and tall for her age, of Youngstown, Ohio, had left the stage in the National Museum auditorium on the word "farcical" just before Humphrey Cook missed the word "homogeneity." So in first, second and third positions among the 21 candidates were Elizabeth Rice, Humphrey Cook and Mildred Kariher, representing the Worcester Telegram and Gazette, the Richmond News Leader, and the Youngstown Vindicator, respectively.

The others are given, with the papers they represented and the horrid words that undid them:

Dorothy Perkins, Des Moines Register and Tribune, fourth, "petulant;" Mary Virginia Logan, Plainfield (N. J.) Courier-News, fifth, "minatory;" Hildegrade Wedding, Louisville ((Ky.) Courier-Journal, sixth, "brethren;" Therese O'Brien, Passaic (N. J.) Herald-News, seventh, "simony;" William Wiegand, Detroit News, eighth, "solecism;" Betty Flood, Miami Herald, ninth, "oracle;" Betty Saum, Columbus Citizen, tenth, "salubrious;" Juanita Routh, Louisville Times, eleventh, "auspices;" Rosemary Haas, Memphis Press Scimitar, twelfth, "chattel;" Martha Gray, wheeling News-Register, thirteenth, "ordnance;" Oliver Haeffner, Denver Hocky Mountain News, fourteenth, "settee;" Carolyn Cooper, Tulsa Tribune, fifteenth, "summary;" Maureen McCluskey, Buffalo Evening News, sixteenth "duteous;" Janie Saunders, Winston-Salem (N. C.) Journal and Sentinel, seventeenth, "adage;" Junie Ratliff, Charleston Daily Mail, eighteenth, "attorney;" Norman Riley, Akron Beacon Journel, nineteenth, "succeeded!" Jane McCall, Knoxville News-Sentinenti, twentieth, "barely;" Josephine Polli, Hoboken News-Observer, twenty-first, "based."

The champion got $500. The second prize was $300; third, $100; fourth to sixteenth, $50; seventeenth to twenty-first, $40. The secret of the champion's success: persistence. Last year she was in a bicycle accident and was carried to the auditorium on a stretcher, when she came in fourth. This year—the winner. She will buy a new bicycle with part of the $500.

The Alexandria Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary will hold services at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier starting at 9:30 a. m. Lieut. Col. Emmanuel Lombard, military attache of the French Embassy, will make a ceremonial visit to the tomb at 10 a. m. Other Arlington rites will include those by L'Union Alsacienne, the Hungarian Federation and the American Gold Star Mothers.

Agents of the Secret Service will make a pilgrimage to the grave of Robert K. Webster in Arlington in memory of Webster's slaying by a Florida rum-runner in 1927 while on a counterfeiting investigation.

To Decorate Graves

To insure that none of Arlington's more than 48,000 graves would be without its flag and flowers, a special delivery truck system was instituted in all police precincts yesterday to make calls at schools and firehouses.

Arrangements have been made to have 250 Boy Scouts meet at the milestone south of the White House Grounds to proceed to Arlington to decorate the graves.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing Post of the Legion held memorial services in the bureau's new auditorium last night.

Separate services will honor the war dead in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties in nearby Maryland. Veterans' organizations in Prince Georges County will parade from the Hyattsville Armory to the Bladensburg Peace Cross on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard, starting at 2:30 p. m. Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer will speak at services at the cross.

Names of five deceased civic leaders, engraved on a granite shaft, will be unveiled by Mount Rainier, Md., officials at 10 a. m. and the Queen was dressed in an Eleanor blue ensemble trimmed with Irish lace. Kilted Seaforth Highlanders, capped with feathered bonnets, served as their guard of honor.

Mace Rites at City Hall

At the City Hall was performed the historic rite of receiving the five-foot golden mace, symbol of his royal authority, from Mayor Lyle Telford. Here fifteen thousand voices rose in singing the Hallelujah chorus.

All units of the Vancouver garrison, together with detachments from the Royal Canadian Air Force and Navy, turned out for the colorful military parade, which sandwiched in ten bands.

The parade route was liberally decorated with bunting and welcoming posters. One sign, however, marked an incongruous note. It read: "Beware Pickpockets."

Breeze Wafts 2 Hats

During the parade a high wind lifted the hat off the head of a lady-in-waiting to the Queen and blew it onto the breast of a gold-braided official. The incident didn't end there, though, for the hat's veil and the braid became entangled, effectively ruining both hat and uniform.

King and Mayor found a common bond on meeting today, when each discovered the other had a bandaged hand, injured when caught in a Both laughed sympathetically. The Queen, meanwhile, was helping a 6-year-old girl save her bonnet from the breeze while trying to present Her Majesty with a bouquet of flowers.

Twenty thousand Yanks from Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and even from as far south as San Francisco swarmed to this population-doubled city to see and applaud Their Majesties.

The Post reporter asked several Americans what led them to come hundreds of miles to see the British sovereigns. Some said frankly it was curiosity or the desire to see a good show.

But this attitude wasn't true of all American spectators here.

"Sure we wanted to see the King and Queen," said a California woman. "It is the least we could do to make a friendly visit and pay our respects to the King and Queen of our best neighbor."

At least one enterprising Yank made a profit out of the visit. He bought out an 80-seat grandstand at $4 per seat and then sold the seats in Seattle at $15 each. The deal assured seats for 80 Americans and assured the promoter $880 net.

After a round of official parties, interviews, and sight-seeing, the royal party boarded the Princess Marguerite to sail for Victoria. As the steamer and four destroyers passed by Lion Gate, 24 Indian war canoes, paddled by braves in full regalia, saluted Their Majesties.

Following a broadcast tomorrow in Victoria, the royal party will turn cast Wednesday for the trip back across the continent en route to Niagara Falls, where Their Majesties will first touch American territory and then head for Washington.

Hope Is Given Up For Baby Clipper

Swede Not Reported

The last previous attempted ocean flight was that of Charles Backman, young Swede who took off from Botwood, Newfoundland, for Sweden, May 16, and has not been reported since. The last successful solo hop was that of Douglas Corrigan, Irish-American pilot who made his famous "wrong-way" flight July 18 of last year, from New York to Dublin, Ireland.

The previous distance record for planes of the type of the "Baby Clipper" was 2,447 miles, made by John M. Jones November 29 and 30, 1938, in a hop from Los Angeles to New York. It had a 50-horsepower motor instead of the 65-horsepower engine in Smith's craft.

While Smith was flying the ocean the Atlantic Clipper, second of the Pan American Airway's 41½-ton flying boats to span the Atlantic on a regularly scheduled mail flight, landed almost unheralded at Marseille, France. It had flown from Lisbon, where it had stopped overnight after flying from New York via the Azores.

U. S. Crew Confident

Portland, Me., May 29 (AP).—As the "deadline" of the Baby Clipper's estimated flying time ended tonight without official word that it had been sighted, its "ground crew" remained confident that it had flown the Atlantic successfully.

D. A. "Doc" Shannon, Detroit motor worker, and two companions who worked on the plane before Thomas H. Smith took off from Old Orchard Beach yesterday for Europe, estimated he had fuel enough to stay aloft for 37 to 39 hours.

"He's on the ground somewhere," said Shannon hopefully when the thirty-ninth hour passed. He expressed belief the "somewhere" was in England.

Embargo Filibuster Warnings Defied

unless title has first been transferred to the foreign purchaser.

It would empower the President to issue a proclamation naming states involved in a war whenever he finds it "endangers the lives of citizens of the United States and threatens the peace of the United States." It would permit the President to designate "areas of combat operations" and restrict movement of American ships in such areas, and would continue operations of the National Munitions Control Board, bar loans and credits to nations at war, prohibit solicitation of funds in this country for warring governments and prohibit American travel on belligerent vessels. There is no provision for application of the measure to civil strife or to wars involving South American republics.

Bloom also called for an executive meeting of his committee tomorrow morning to consider action on his measure. A close division was reported in his committee on proposed arms embargo removal, but Bloom said he believed the House would approve it.

Pittman said he does not propose that his Senate committee start voting tomorrow on the pending half-dozen conflicting amendments, but to merely set a date. He indicated committee action may not come for another fortnight. He said he thought the Senate could proceed to debate with comparative safety, "as the international situation has quieted down, and there is no immediate threat of war."

"Ample Time to Act"

Questioned on the "timing" of Secretary Hull's week-end plea for amendment, Pittmann said he thought the Secretary "realized we are going to be in session for at least another six weeks, which should be ample time to act.

"Besides, there is no question in my mind that if we adjourn without amending the law, and an other war threat develops, there will be a special session. And I think there ought to be."

Blunt threats of a filibuster that would keep Congress in session all summer if necessary to block arms embargo repeal preceded and followed Pittman's announcement of an effort to get action on his bill. Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, said coalition isolationists are prepared to stay in session "until snow flies" if necessary.

Leading the House Republican attack on the Hull recommendations was Representative Fish, of New York. Fish said "Hull's program, if carried out, would make the United States the slaughterhouse and arsenal for arms, ammunition and implements of war for all nations, and particularly for Great Britain which controls the seas."

The 25-man House Foreign Affairs Committee was reported to be almost evenly divided on the Hull proposals, with all 10 Republicans and at least two Democrats opposing arms embargo repeal.

Paint First Used For Shields

One of the first uses of paint as a decorative art in northern Europe probably was the coloring of shields, which dates back to the eleventh century, though what is known as the "Golden Age of Heraldry" occurred in the thirteenth and fifteenth centuries.

Long before that time, the Ambri carried shields painted white to identify themselves in the wilderness from the Ari, on the upper Vistula, who carried black shields; the Saxons and the Scandinavians, whose shields were red, and the Friesians and Franks whose shields were white and yellow.

The artists who embellished those shields were called Schilder in German, and the name has survived to the present day, the members of that craft in Holland now going under the title of Schilderer.

Apartment House Adapts Monochrome Scheme

Vandenberg Favors One-Term Pledge

that he would accept the nomination."

Writing Mapes, Vandenberg said present responsibilities "require me to announce that I shall be a candidate to succeed myself in the United States Senate. If there are subsequent responsibilities of a broader nature, I shall meet them to the best of my ability."

Urges Constructive Platform

"You are good enough to credit me with sincerity in asserting that the next Republican Presidential nomination transcends all ordinary quests," Vandenberg's letter continued. "The next Republican convention must first set down clean-cut, constructive, courageous principles which dependably promise to save the American system of free enterprise under the renewed spirit of Constitutional democracy, and to recapture prosperity for our whole people under a Government restored to solvency. Then it should fit its nomination to its principles."

Vandenberg said that in his opinion "the nominations should flow from the deliberative judgment of a convention wholly free to search out the wisest, surest answers to these critical problems."

"Holding this deep conviction," he said, "it would be wholly out of character for me personally to pursue the nomination myself. It is for the people themselves to speak."

Meanwhile, it was reported here that former President Hoover was urging privately that State delegations to sent to the Republican convention uninstructed, except for a few supporting "favorite sons."

International News Service dispatches from Austin, Tex., last night quoted Reconstruction Finance Chairman Jesse H. Jones as disclaiming any political ambitions. Introduced before a joint session of the Texas Legislature, Jones said:

"I have no political ambitions, no hopes. I am for my party. I am part of the Administration."

Iowans Back Third Term

Des Moines, Iowa, May 29.—Iowa's Young Democratic organization today indorsed President Roosevelt for a third term "if he should make himself available."

The organization adopted a resolution at its annual convention paying tribute to Iowa's two favorite sons, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Secretary of Commerce Hopkins as men "of Presidential stature."

"For us, however," the resolution added, "there is but one man, one of the great Americans of all time—the man who brought order and security to a nation demoralized and starving, a nation ready to jitter into revolt, the foremost leader in the world today for world peace."

Ickes Denies Use Of Sylvan Theater To Gentile League

Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, yesterday made public a sharp rebuke to groups fostering racial prejudices in announcing he had denied a request by the National Gentile League for use of the Sylvan Theater on the grounds of the Washington Monument for a three-day rally beginning June 6.

"The Sylvan Theater," Secretary Ickes said, "belongs to all of the people of the United States regardless of race, color or creed and for that reason we should not permit its use by an organization that, according to its letterhead and the body of its application, is designed to foster, if not to create, race prejudice against another group of American citizens."

Jobless Auto Driver Sets World Record

Duncan, Okla., May 29 (AP).—M. O. Weaver, unemployed railroader who more than doubled the world's non-stop aut driving recor , rolled to a stop today when a motor valve stuck—just 943 hours and 46 minutes after his start April 20.

Weaver's record was unofficial because he lacked funds to arrange for American Automobile Association judges and timers.

Sub-committee Asks Rejection of Boyle Nomination

A Senate Judiciary sub-committee recommended yesterday, 4 to 2, that the President's nomination of William S. Boyle to be United States attorney for Nevada be rejected.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, had opposed the nomination as "jersonally obnoxious" to him, while Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, who advocates confirmation, said:

"I don't believe, as does my colleague, Senator McCurran, that this appointment was made because of a desire on the part of the President, as McCarran alleges, to take a slap at him."

McCarran had indorsed E. P. Carville for reappointment as United States Attorney. Carville is now Nevada's Governor.

Peggy Fears Loses $41,000 Suit

Boston, May 29 (AP).—The Massachusetts Supreme Court dismissed today a suit brought by Margaret (Peggy) Fears Blumenthal, former New York actress, against her estranged husband, Alfred C. Blumenthal, New York theatrical producer, in which she sought to set aside a stock transaction allegedly involving $41,000.

She contended that after she was awarded $20,000 a year by the New York Supreme Court in 1934 under a separation agreement, Blumenthal turned over valuable theater stock to his sister, Mrs. Miriam Rogers, of Brookline, Mass.

Collings Slaying Story Doubted

Chicago, May 29 (INS).—After 24 hours of intense grilling police tonight were about ready to discard the "confession" of Noble C. Chambers, 22, that he could solve the mystery slaying of Benjamin P. Collings eight years ago.

Chambers' story that he was aboarfd the Collings yacht when the slaying occurred in Long Island Sound doesn't hold together, according to District Attorney Fred J. Munder of Suffolk County, N. Y.

Homeowners Add Stability To Community

W. O. Cooley Points To Economic Value In Avoiding Rent

"Why should I buy a home now?" is the thought of many who contemplate purchase of real estate, according to W. O. Cooley, chairman of the home builders committee of Washington Real Estate Board. These individuals, he explains, are sincerely seeking the answer to their question, for the field of housing and the large number of new dwellings erected are directing attention of many persons to the desirability of owning their own homes.

Nothing contributes more definitely to the stability of our population, develops family loyalty and unity, or promotes a common goal toward which mother, father, brother and sister can work together than does ownership of a home, he reminds, adding that value in home ownership goes far beyond the house and extends to the community at large, thereby adding to the economic, civic and social value of the community. Seldom do owners of homes become followers of various "isms" which confront European countries.

Offers Many Advantages

The home offers many advantages but one of the main benefits centers around the children, he cites. There are many factors which may influence children adversely and one of the best places for teaching them the fundamentals of life is a happy home environment.

"From the economic side," Cooley says, "there is no question but that owning your home pays dividends, provided, of course, that one buys a home within his means and for which he can pay, for the fact remains that the person who pays rent for 10 or 15 years has less to show for it and the one who purchased a home has it practically paid for within that time. In addition, he has collateral upon which he may borrow money, if necessary.

"Many persons trace their start in life to the time when they established an equity in real estate. There are cycles during which much money has been made through investment in real estate but to the prospective home buyer it should be explained that acquisition of a home should not be with the idea, 'how much money will it make me,' but the ideal that purchase of the house will form the basis of his future worth, independence and security in the declining years of his life.

Wider Range of Homes

"The real estate broker today has a much wider range of houses to offer his clients than has been the experience in this section for many years," Cooley recalls. "Many moderate priced homes, which are eligible for 25-year financing under the Federal Housing Administration, and those in the higher-priced range coming under 20-year financing, may be found in and around Washington. These homes offer the purchaser much more for his money today than at any time since the World War, and they are planned to fit the needs of the family. With a resumption of home building upon a Nation-wide scale, which is one of the objectives of the administration, it is highly probable that materials and construction prices will show some increases and the prospective home buyer should not hesitate in making his selection now while houses are being offered at normal prices."

Railings Finished In Copper Color

It is sometimes desirable to change the effect of heavy iron railings on the outside of buildings. A reliable method for finishing them like tarnished copper is as follows: if the railings have been previously painted, all scaling paint should be removed from the rusty section and the exposed metal primed with red lead. Follow this with an all-over coating of white paint.

If the railings are new, however, clean away all rust and scale, prime with red lead and coat with white paint. When dry, go over with orange chrome ground in oil, followed, after proper drying, by a glaze of burnt Turkey umber mixed with oil. While still wet, wipe the glaze from the prominent surfaces of the railing with a clean cloth. When dry, cover with a first quality elastic varnish.

If you desire a metallic sheen Japan gold size mixed with copper bronze powder should be applied over the second coating and allowed to dry until tacky. Over this apply dry copper bronze powder—to the more prominent surfaces—with a chamois skin. When this coating has become completely dry, apply the glaze of burnt Turkey umber and oil and wipe as directed. The last coating should be of pale carriage varnish.

White House Being Scrubbed For Royal Visit

Real Dutch Cleaning To Get Everything Spick and Span

By Lonore Kent

The White House will be ablaze with lights the night the state dinner is given there for the King and Queen of England. The famous horseshoe table in the state dining room will gleam with fine linen and silver and with the Roosevelt china in cobalt blue and gold. Flowers from the White House conservatory—probably roses—will lend color to the room and 20 spick and span waiters will be ready to serve dinner—a dinner that will be typically American.

The menu, as it is planned at the moment, begins with a clam cocktail—with clams on the half shell. Then will come calf's head soup with sherry. Broiled filet of flounder will be served with mushroom wine sauce and sliced tomatoes. This will be followed by boned capon with cranberry sauce, peas, buttered beets and sweet potato cones. Frozen cheese and cress salad will be rounded off with maple-flavored ice cream with almonds. There will, of course, be other "trimmings," such as rolls, cakes and coffee, but the menu will be substantially the same as it is now planned.

In preparation for the visit of royalty, the first household of the land has undergone a thorough spring house cleaning or, as the Dutch say, "een groote beurt." Near the Zuider Zee, een kleine beurt means a "small turnout" or cleaning, but een groote beurt means a real field day. Not that the White House does not undergo een groote beurt every spring. It does. But it wouldn't be surprising if the polishing and shining and cleaning that has gone on from attic to basement has had added impetus this spring—nor if the painter who is constantly engaged in keeping the painted surfaces of the White House smooth and shipshape has been even more diligent than usual. It surely constitutes an extraordinary occasion when England's King and Queen come to visit. Needless to say, the President's Palace—as the White House was once known—will be in top form for Their Majesties.

The Washington Business Review shows that of this total, 868 home and 1,174 apartment units were begun the first four months of 1939, as against 519 home units and 506 apartment units during the comparative period last year, or respective gains of 349 and 668.

Repairs Keep Home In Good Condition

A reliable method for keeping the home in good condition is to check it over every spring and make what repairs are needed. The average home needs some repairs each year.

If neglected, many minor defects may become major ones and will be expensive to correct.

Wall or Fence Lends Privacy

By building a wall or fence along the lot lines or by planting a hedge, privacy, as well as appearance of a house, may be enchanced.

The type of architecture of the house largely governs the kind of inclosure used. Colonial cottages and frame houses in general call for a white picket fence or a neatly clipped hedge. The fences may be selected from many styles ranging from the least expensive type with plain flat palings to the more ornate variety with rounded pickets and fanlight gate.

Masonry walls best frame brick dwellings of Georgian architecture. These may be any height desired, according to conditions. If the house is on a busy street and complete privacy is desired, a high wall that completely shuts out the view from the street is suggested. Under other conditions, a lower wall is usually desirable.

A stucco wall best complements Spanish or Mediterranean architecture, although hedges of various types may also be used effectively. In planning a hedge, the home owner should consult a nurseryman before making his plant selections, as an expert can tell him what variety will thrive best in his soil.

Rust Hole Lets Insects In

One tiny rust hole in a summer window screen forms an entrance for a potential army of disease-spreading insects. Copper screening, however, is rustproof.

Six Dwellings Planned

Harry E. and Louis Gorin will build six two-story brick dwellings costing $42,000, at 1358-1338 Tewkesbury place northwest, from designs by J. P. Fitzsimmons.

No Academic Issue

Secretary Hull was on firm and familiar ground when, at Chicago on Sunday, he pointed out the perils inherent for the United States in any policy of isolation.

Because this Nation is fabulously rich in the range and extent of its material resources it is too easily assumed that we are in a position to free ourselves completely of dependence on the outside world. Such a course, far from solving any national problems, would tend to multiply them. Such isolation would make it necessary for the United States to undertake a very far-reaching adjustment of our agricultural life and our industrial economy. It would be, as Mr. Hull points out, an "undertaking of such magnitude that it could not possibly be accomplished without far-reaching intervention on the part of the Government, with dangerous social effects."

To be sure, there are not many Americans who favor a policy of complete economic isolation. But it is customary to hear that political developments overseas are of no vital concern to this country; that it makes no essential difference to us whether, in the present struggle for power in Europe, the totalitarian powers or their opponents get the upper hand.

What is forgotten is that the political struggle raging in Europe and in Asia has an economic basis. This is pointed out by Mr. Hull when he says that, "the well-being of every nation increases in proportion as its citizens have peaceful access to the resources of the world rather than merely to those within its own frontiers."

But as the system of autarchy favored by Germany and Italy is extended, the area of normal international trade is, by the same token, restricted. Nations which would like to trade with other nations find the opportunities for doing so steadily reduced, with the result that they also are pushed to policies of self-sufficiency.

Were the United States really in a position to live within its own borders, such a development could be viewed with relative unconcern. Since American prosperity actually depends, in no small degree, on widening the frontiers of unimpeded trade, the spread of autarchy also threatens our economic well-being. The isolationists may be technically correct in saying that this or that political development in Europe is, by itself, of relatively little concern to the United States. The trend behind these developments, and the consequences which spring therefrom, however, are of vital import to all Americans.

The Gift Of Tongues

There is no doubt that Mr. LaGuardia makes the ideal mayor for a city sponsoring a world's fair.

Not very long ago, when they were dedicating the Italian pavilion at the fair, the mayor made a very pretty little speech in the language of Dante and Boccaccio, much admired by all who understood it. Perhaps, in view of Mr. LaGuardia's antecedents, this was not altogether extraordinary. However, a few days later, when the spotlight was on the Yugoslav exhibit, the mayor astonished even those who know him pretty closely by waxing eloquent for fully five minutes in Croatian.

And again last Thursday the mayor spoke touchingly in French about the traditions that bind the great sister democracies and about how France "stood by us in 1776." His Gallic fervor aroused so much admiration that hardly anybody noticed the mayor was a couple of years out in the date of the French alliance.

How many more of these linguistic tricks Mr. LaGuardia still has up his sleeve will appear presently, as one by one the remaining pavilions are dedicated. We should not be much surprised to read of him delivering speeches in Basque, Scotch, Gaelic, classical Chinese, Icelandic and Esperanto. One hopes that the mayor will not ultimately be overtaken by the pitiful fate of a celebrated Dutch philologist, who learned so many languages so thoroughly that he became unable to speak or write a complete sentence in any one of them.

Not even the wonderful stuff Mr. LaGuardia has been exhibiting this month around the Lagoon of Nations, however, equals the linguistic tour de force performed by one of his predecessors. That mayor, as he once told a delighted Hellenic-American audience, was devoted to the classics. After a hard day of grappling with the subway fare problem or wrangling with the Board of Estimates, he loved nothing better, he said, than to sit by his fireside reading Horace "in the original Greek."

Perhaps it all goes to prove that the great cosmopolitan New York is a wonderful place for learning almost any language—except, of course, English.

Heading For A Snarl

Hot weather in Washington always stimulates thoughts of adjournment in Congress. About this time of year, also, the legislators habitually discover that they have disposed of only a fraction of the bills requiring attention. So the first indications of summer become a signal for the inauguration of heroic measures to speed up the legislative machinery.

Not so many years ago businessmen were supposed to look forward eagerly to the adjournment of Congress, as one way of diminishing uncertainty. Now it appears to be the Administration which is particularly anxious to see Congress finish its job and go home. That is not unnatural, for the biggest question left unanswered by the present Congress is how far it will go in amending New Deal laws that are not operating satisfactorily.

Until last week, however, the Administration had done very little to facilitate the task of Congress. No position was taken on neutrality and tax revision—two of the most controversial issues awaiting legislative action. The delays, resulting partly from this absence of leadership and partly from the confusion within Congress, now threaten to involve the 1939 session in a serious snarl.

Fortunately, nine appropriation bills have been enacted and several more are in conference. Aside from these supply bills, however, the legislative accomplishments of the last five months are small. The Government reorganization bill was passed and two executive orders under that law have been approved. Congress has also enacted a national defense program, extended the life of the Export-Import Bank and the mortgage insurance powers of the FHA, passed a bill for reciprocal taxation of Federal and State salaries, and voted down the Florida ship canal.

But these accomplishments are overshadowed by the list of major bills which await action. In addition to revising the Neutrality Act and easing tax irritants, Congress is confronted by a proposed sweeping revision of the Social Security Act, and by less far-reaching amendments to the wage-hour law. Little headway has been made, moreover, on elimination of recognized defects in the National Labor Relations Act, or in enactment of the refugee children bill. Investigation of the WPA has not been completed and the comprehensive Byrnes bill to reorganize the Federal relief system is still before the Senate.

Other measures demanding consideration include the USHA bill, the proposed ratification of the TVA's purchase of private utility plants in the Tennessee Valley, and legislation to extend the President's power over the dollar and to remove the current limit on issuance of long-term Government bonds. To these must be added three railroad bills, which have passed the Senate, and the District of Columbia reorganization bill, to say nothing of the Townsend plan measure, veterans legislation, the La Follette anti-strikebreaker bill and various others.

Obviously not all of this list can be disposed of or even considered. In trimming its program, however, Congress ought to remember that next year the United States will be in the throes of a Presidential campaign. It will then be far more difficult to examine legislative proposals on their own intrinsic merits. Failure to attend to unfinished business at this session may mean postponement of action until 1941. And if that happens the next Congress may be more disposed to abolish than to modify New Deal agencies that have become focal points of attack.

Despite hot weather, there is no good reason why Congress should quit before its job is done. Everyone would like to see the Congressional program expedited. Before any really important measure is jettisoned, however, Congressional leaders ought to reflect that the atmosphere today is far more favorable to serious legislative effort than it will be a year hence.

The Yankee Clippers

To the baseball universe the problem of the New York Yankees stands in much the same relation as does the unemployment problem to the capitalist system. That is to say, if the competitive system is to survive—and baseball without competition would be a painful paradox—something must be done and done soon about the Yankees.

All sorts of devices have already been tried, most notably the vast spending program launched by Mr. Tom Yawkee when he took over administration of the Boston Red Sox. And it is true that after several years Mr. Yawkee seems to have got a pretty good ball club in exchange for his millions.

As of Sunday night the Sox had managed to win slightly more than two-thirds of their games, including seven out of the preceding eight. But when the clubs came together at Boston yesterday it was no trouble at all for the Yanks to put them through the wringer. So today the Yanks are in front by six and a half games.

The Yankees are impervious even to the element of luck, ordinarily so decisive a factor in baseball. What in any other club would be major calamities do not disturb them at all. It has made no difference that Gehrig is gone, that mighty DiMaggio has been on the invalid list, or that the great Dickey mislaid his batting eye for a week or so. The Yanks kept on winning just the same.

Some say that this is not because of any special managerial genius on the part of Mr. Joe McCarthy, but because of the highly developed system which gives the Yankees a quasi-monopoly of the highest grade ivory. How the Yankees stand in relation to the 15 other major league clubs in the matter of raw materials is pretty well illustrated by the case of the venerable Tony Lazzeri. Two seasons ago, finding the pace too strenuous for one of his years, he retired voluntarily from the Yankees. Now Tony is shuffling cheerfully around third base for the New Deal Giants because Mr. Terry despite the generous expense account he commands, has apparently been unable to put his hands on a first-rate young infielder.

Today, with the season barely a month advanced, it appears that only the collision of the earth with another planet can prevent the Yanks from winning a fourth consecutive pennant. So far as the American League race is concerned the principal question of interest seems to be whether the Browns and the Athletics can continue to throw away ball games fast enough to keep our own Senators out of the cellar.

The Randolph Statement

For the moment Congressman Randolph's views as to the chairmanship of the House District Committee seem to overshadow his efforts to aid certain contractors who were interested in securing changes in District paving specifications. Mr. Randolph emphatically denies that he discussed "with the two individuals representing the company in question" any consideration to be granted him for introducing them to Washington officials. But he tacitly admits that he took advantage of his position as chairman of the District Committee to intercede with local officials in behalf of a commercial concern.

Added to this is Mr. Randolph's decision to resign from leadership of the House District Committee because he considers that obligation worse than a "big headache." "The requests, demands, pressure and impositions brought upon me," he says, "are too much to be borne by any person. Instead of a 'big headache,' the job is a combination of a headache, a heartache and a bodyache which I no longer propose to bear."

Accepting this statement at its face value, it becomes the strongest possible argument for granting the District a government of its own, one which will not have to curry favor with strategically placed Congressmen to secure the enactment of routine municipal ordinances. Mr. Randolph has expressed the dislike of virtually all members of the House for service on the District Committee. They consider it an imposition to be assigned a task so remote from the interests of their constituents. And so it is. Thus the only logical outcome of this incident, so far as the District is concerned, would be the creation of a local municipal government which could operate with some degree of independence from Congress.

Of course, Mr. Randolph had no reasonable alternative to announcing his intention to resign as chairman of the committee. His correspondence with the District Commissioners, which he asked them to make public, contains the specific request: "I trust something favorable can be worked out for this company." When the chairman of the committee handling District legislation uses the influence of that office in this manner, he can scarcely expect to retain the confidence of the community.

But it is far more than a question of an individual misusing the influence of his office. The chaotic and undemocratic method by which the District is governed lends itself to precisely this sort of abuse. Creation here of a municipal government, which could act for itself in community affairs, has long been recognized as urgent and desirable. Mr. Randolph's statement places that reform on the immediate "must" list.

Gypsy Bride Market

From the Des Moine Register.

Some very soft spots have developed in the gypsy bride market. A dispatch from Belgrade, Yugoslavia, says the top quotation at the annual Kraljevo fair, where the young Romany purchase their wives, was $6.40 for selected brunettes, Ordinary family grades were as low as $3.60 and $4.

It may be straying from the subject, perhaps, to wonder why brunettes should fetch the highest prices for gypsy brides, seeing that they are a dark race and a blonde gypsy should have scarcity value.

More to the point is the fact that the figures are considerably lower than those asked in recent years by parents. Students of the market would have welcomed an exact comparison between this year's high of $6.40 and the average price for brunette firsts in the base period, 1923-1929, and in the pre-war period, 1909-1914.

To Baseball Fans

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I wish to make a few remarks concerning the booing of Cecil Travis, as I happened to be present at the game. Cecil had a bad day in the field, and when he came to bat the last two times there was a loud chorus of boos, but the fact has been overlooked that there were also many handclaps. In fact, the booing and the cheering was about equally divided.

I have seen hundreds of baseball games and have heard mingled boos and cheers before, but probably never on such a scale. The booers seemed to be trying to outdo the cheering, but the handclappers about held their own.

Cecil has been playing under a severe handicap, and it is this writer's opinion that he is a fine ball player. He is comparatively young, with many years of service ahead of him. But the wolves can get a player, because if a man loses confidence in himself he is through. This correspondent has played bush league baseball and seen players go down under a heavy razz.

There is some talk of trading Travis. Whether this is done or not, I hope that the Washington fans give him a hearty hand the next time he plays on the home grounds. ONE WHO CLAPPED.

Dr. Smith's Hearing

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I wish to express my appreciation of the editorial entitled "Futile Hearing" which appeared in your issue of May 27. I do not, however, agree with you in regard to the futility of the hearing. Its purpose will, I believe, be fully apparent before it is concluded. I was entirely aware of the nature of the testimony before I insisted upon a public hearing, and not one surprise has been sprung on me so far.

You also state that "the Board of Public Welfare probably wished—for the sake of Dr. Smith . . . to avoid publication of the testimony that has now gone into the record. In the discharge of public responsibilities no one should be spared or shielded, and I am most grateful for the opportunity to indicate to the board its kindly solicitude for me in 1937 was entirely gratuitous.

The Supreme Court And The Gold Clause

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your editorial in The Post of May 25, "Clarification Needed," regarding the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the "St. Louis-Southwestern Railway" case, ably summarizes the majority and minority points of view, but fails to suggest other grounds on which the case might have been decided, but apparently was not.

Whether or not the issue was raised and considered by the court, it might be proper to query whether Congress, in legislating as the majority of the court has construed it to have done, has not in fact transcended those limitations of international law which the court itself must presume it has not intended to do (this according to a decision rendered many years ago by the Chief Justice when an associate justice of that court).

Here is an international obligation, between citizens of the United States and the subjects of a foreign power, wholly valid when made, wholly within the bounds of public law and policy, set aside and impaired in derogation of public international law by a domestic regulation. It would seem that the court must deem the rule of international law binding, and thence have been under clear duty to construe the provision of the joint resolution of Congress invalidating gold clauses in private contracts as not intended to have impaired the obligations then created and subsisting of American citizens to any foreign state, citizen or subject thereof.

The question may be asked whether "the people" in their individual and collective sovereignty have not an inherent right, retained to them under the fifth, ninth and tenth amendments, to be protected by their Congress and their courts in the integrity of their contractual obligations. The question may again be asked whether the people have not an inalienable sovereign right that Congress preserve the integrity of the Nation's obligations and refrain from acts of commisson or omission frustrating performance thereof. These are rights sovereign in the people and not to be denied or disparaged. Yet on the contrary assumption these "gold clause" decisions have proceeded.

In that relating to gold clauses in Government obligations, no principle is settled unless as to the lack of remedy. The court admitting the repudiation and the entire want of power in Congress to breach its contracts, found itself impotent to give a remedy, recovery being barred by Congressional failure to open the courts to such end. This opinion imports so high a prerogative in the Congress as to challenge the principle on which it rested; i. e., that the United States may not be sued without its consent. But, if the Constitution itself be not that act of consent as to rights and powers retained and reserved to the people, then indeed is our judicial organization defective.

To admit that the Supreme Court of the United States is without authority to safeguard that which the Constitution has secured to the people against "power from any quarter" is to demean the Nation's justice; yet it is directly to such conclusion that these decisions lead.

It is insufficient to look to Congress for relief from the unfortunate results: the question must be met by the court itself; i. e., whether it possesses judicial authority to require the maintenance of the trust of Government and curb usurpation of power over the retained soverign right of all the people. Its great original jurisdiction should be re-examined, for by recurrence to it alone can the sovereignty, the Commonwealth, the welfare of all be preserved. These decisions presuppose sovereignty in the Government; they deny the inherent retained sovereign right of the whole body of the people. Let us not forget the words of Chief Justice Jay in Chisholm vs. Georgis: "The sovereignty of the States is in the people of the States, and the sovereignty of the United States is in the people of the United States."

This great foundational principle may not be disregarded without proportionate injury to the whole body of our liberties. What has been reserved by the Constitution or retained to the people delimits each and every, indeed the sum total of those great powers reposed in Congress. A return to this principle is essential if we would save America from the ruin that envisages it in acceptance of the idea of sovereignty in Government paramount to the people's retained sovereign right.

To Balance The Budget

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

From time to time the topic of balancing the budget comes up in the press. Sometimes it is discussed seriously at length; sometimes it is treated in the form of jocular political caricature with Mr. Citizen going to the White House and demanding that the budget be balanced, and when he is answered by the question, "Now, where would you begin?" he is represented as retiring foolishly in silent discomfiture; the obvious implication being that the question is unanswerable since nobody wants to have his own ox gored.

This letter is not intended as a contention either for or against balancing the budget, but to point out that there is at least one simple and conclusive answer to that supposedly unanswerable question. It is the ordinary answer of common sense; to begin at the beginning and reduce all Federal expenditures in the same proportion, say 10 per cent, or even 5 as a starter, to apply to each individual appropriation Congress is called upon to make. This procedure would permit no group to raise any reasonable complaint of discrimination.

Appropriations for national defense should, of course, be exempted from reduction, but salaries, official and quasi-official, paid by the Federal Government ought in justice to be subject to it as far as is constitutionally possible, a precedent having been created by President Roosevelt in his admirable economy order of 1933—rescinded a year or two later—where the salary reduction went as far as 15 per cent, if I remember rightly.

No such evasive objection as "Where would you begin?" can survive examination.

Better Living

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In your editorial on "Idle Capital" you suggest the removal of taxes on profits as a stimulation of investments in new fields. If the present capacity of industry were utilized sufficiently there would be a natural expansion of industry and more employment, despite the fact that profits are not large.

With more employment there would be less need for taxes for the relief of the unemployed. The cause of our troubles is the failure to consume adequately the products of our present aggregate industrial plant; the cause is not the failure to expand. What is needed is better living and consumption in better homes by those with the larger incomes or in the alternative a tax receipt for money required for the relief of the unemployed.

Removal of taxes on profits would increase the supply of idle capital or increase speculation, unless the Government forces the proper use of capital that would prevent such a result. Appropriate force would be a tax of confiscatory proportions against investment and saving of more than 20 per cent of the income of individuals, with added allowances for dependents. This maximum to be increased when full employment is reached. Life insurance, annuities and the purchase of more land than is necessary for a home should be classed as investments. Increased investments, to be successful, must be preceded by a certainty of better living. It is constantly better living that supports all investments, a fundamental truth not generally recognized.

Here She Is Fifteen

Somewhere else she may be 17 now and very wise, and in still other places she will be 20 and marveling she could ever have been so foolish, 27 and wondering if she is getting old, 35 and feeling young, 43 and sometimes tired, 50 and mostly contented, 56 . . .

But here she will always be 15, for to judge her we have only the things she left behind. We shall not, except by coincidence, ever see her.

She must have been popular when she lived on this street. The night after we moved in, the boys started dropping by.

"Is Emily here?" they asked. "Well, she used to be." They didn't seem to believe us.

They weren't old enough to think about begging our pardon; their disappointment came uppermost.

"We were looking for Dennisons. There was supposed to be a birthday party." (She must have had a number of admirers who were just casual acquaintances to her. These she would invite to a party, but their presence was not so important she would remember to tell them she had a new address. Two or three, perhaps, older boys, she would call up and cajole, worried over the possibility they might have other engagements.)

From a trash box in the basement we fished a neatly typed table:

1. Phil Harris—"The Girl Friend of the Whirling Dervish."
2. Kay Kyser—"Umbrella Man."
3. Guy Lombardo—"I Must See Annie Tonight."

There were 16 items.

We searched the box again and brought up another page, less neatly prepared:

"Well, it won't be long now before I can judge for myself. That's the station ahead. Take it easy, Kit," she squealed as the car swerved around a corner.

The train was just pulling in. Kit climbed out and went for Carol's door.

"Do you think he'll mind my clothes?" Carol wanted to know. "If he does I'll sock him; you look fresh as a daisy in that rig." Kit laughed and they started off down the steps to the platform.

A large group of college kids grouped themselves together as soon as they left the train and began to sing a school song. Michael was not among them, however, and there wasn't anyone in uniform. Then near the end of the line Kit saw him.

"There he is," she exclaimed.

"Where?" Carol asked staring wildly about, and then she saw the uniformed boys getting out down the line. There were six or seven of them.

One of them waved as they approached and Kit returned the salute. From a distance he really was nice looking Carol decided. He was big, about five feet nine and muscular looking. His hair was slightly tinged with gold; other than that it was white. He was carrying his hat in his hand and a suitcase in the other and Carol noticed that he did wear a uniform better than most of the other boys.

"Hi, Kit," he said as he came up to them. "How's everything with my 'gal-slaying' baby brother?"

"O. K., scum of the earth!" Kit answered. "Here gimme that bag, you old swab stick."

Then he saw Michael looking at Carol and he said, "Oh, Michael, this is Carol Rothby . . . Carol, this is my god-awful big brother."

And that is how, we presume, the heroine met the man of her dreams. A sane heroine, we noticed, with the tempered ideas characteristic of her generation. Her hero was big, but hardly a giant. He was no slicker; apparently he had a military haircut and it had got sunburned. He wore his uniform better than most, but not necessarily all, of the other boys.

Not bad writing, you see, for 15—if that was her age. And we found evidence to support our guess. The next exhibit we found was on lined note paper:

1. ibi
2. quidam, quaedam, quoddam
3. dimitto, -mittere, -isi, -missum

There were some more lists of phonograph records; and:

Things I love:

1. The Tune of Rainbow on the River.
2. The Land of the Sky Blue Water.

We found, too, a sheet of paper on which apparently a number of persons had been typing:

Dear Emily, Nelly thinks she is a glamour girl . . .

Dear Nelly, I love you I love you I love you. And I do mean you . . .

Dear Sal, We are gathered here to await the arri . . . Franz Fischer, Berlin-Wilmersdorf, Birnbaumstr, 9 . . .

That address is the only element of true mystery in Emily's life, so far as we are concerned. Whether it is a part of her experience or whether she painted it into the picture herself, who shall ever know.

Certainly there is nothing uncommon about the following document, dated 1-1-39:

I hereby resolve to:
Drink less gooey wine slower.
To live, love and learn.
To raise hell with everyone's heart.
To act cool and collected.
To meet everyone possible.
To love the hated.
To hate the beloved.
To go to church at least once.
To laugh at everything that isn't funny.
To go out of the room when too perturbed over the unfunny.
To complete everything I start.
To like more girls and less boys.

Wherever Emily is—and Emily isn't her real name, of course—we're betting she didn't keep all of them. But there she's no longer 15, and she's making other resolutions.

Not Statesmanship

IT IS WORTH while to pause about here and observe that some characteristics of the New Deal also might be put to the uses of a violent reactionary or Fascist regime. A Fascist President of Huey Long's brutal and ruthless temperament or Hitler's would use methods which the radical left has indorsed to justify acts that a Communist would deeply mourn.

For example, this Government has indulged in violent, hate-provoking language not only in speeches of the President himself, but in occasional orations by lesser figures, notably Harold Ickes. Now name-calling is not statesmanship, and the bright and mischievous young epitheticians of the New Deal who wake up in the night to snap on the bedlight and jot down dirties to be inserted in fireside chats are asking the people of the country to assume great risks as the price of their vanity and fun.

Of course, it pleases the radical New Dealer to hear American businessmen who are neither devils nor saints called Bourbons and Tories, and political moderates called copperheads, a copperhead being a venomous snake. But it must be remembered that Hitler and Goebbels are gifted name callers and that a Fascist President would claim an established right to call all his opponents Bolsheviks and traitors.

We Do Not Know What Hate Can Do

THERE IS NO truth in these generalizations in Germany, nor would they be honestly applicable to all opposition here, but a political paranoiac of the type which springs up in frantic nationalist movements these days would give them the effect of truth by constant, angry repetition. Hitler frankly admits that the truth is a handcuff to a dictator, and says that lies, repeated over and over, will wear down the intelligence of the people and be accepted.

Up to now we in this country don't know what hate really can do, but a little reference to its exploitation in Europe should warn Americans that that gun is loaded. Ickes may think of himself as a harmless wag whose needling will not be taken seriously, and it is true that the same speeches by the same man would command no hearing at all if he did not occupy an important Government position. But it happens that he does hold an important position, and when he reveals a preference for groups that are notably cordial to Communists and is guilty of carelessness or exaggeration in matters of fact to obtain effect he invites a future Secretary of Interior to consort with Fascists and take similar liberties or worse.

Propaganda by the Government is another weapon that the New Deal justifies on the same ground that is offered in Russia and in the axis countries. It is said that the people have a right to pure information about their Government and that the Government itself is in the best position to give it to them. But a government will not give itself a bad report, and the information service, including radio material, becomes political propaganda.

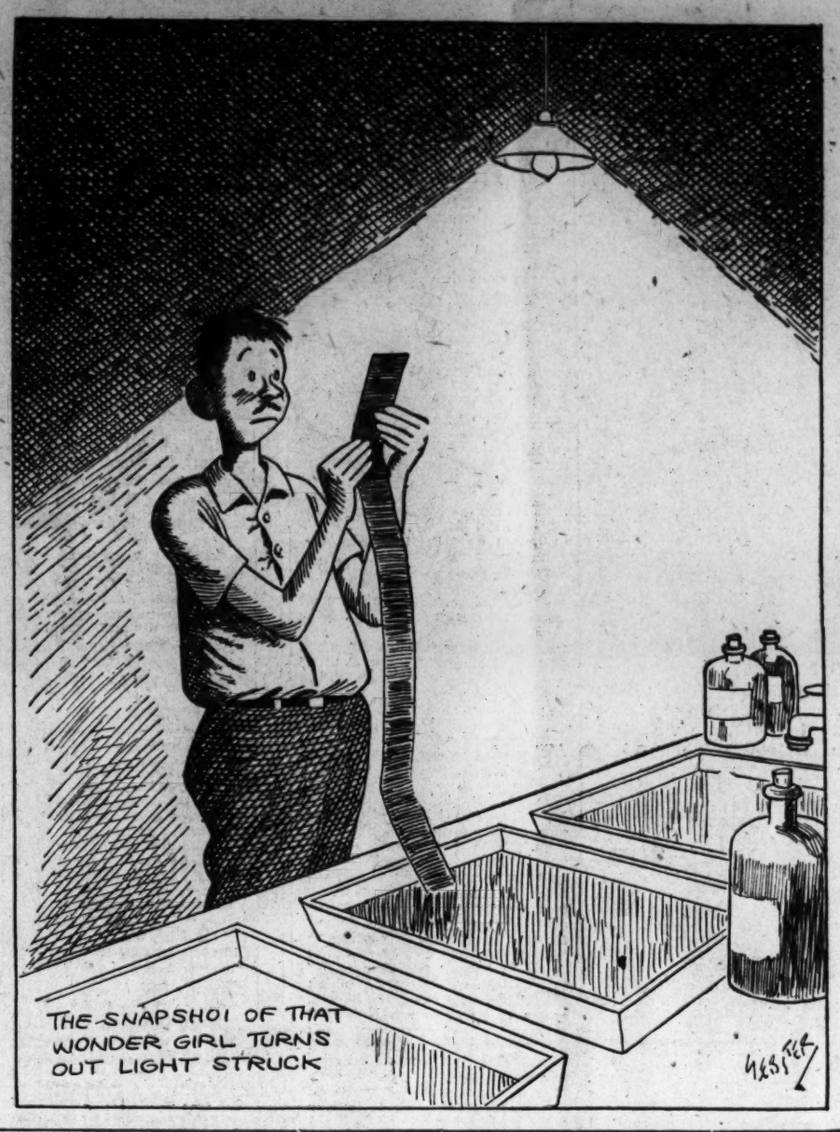
Minton Proposed Press Gag Law

IT TAKES NO EFFORT of the imagination to fancy the uses to which this New Deal precedent might be put by an administration with Fascist leanings. There is no need to use the imagination. The examples are visible in Europe, and it is a grave mistake of the New Deal to indorse by its own practice a weapon that a future administration could use to overpower the intelligence and resistance of the people. The New Deal may claim to have used it sparingly but it has approved this weapon nevertheless.

One New Deal Senator, Minton, of Indiana, once proposed a press gag law that might have made it felonious to publish the Bible and, although this bill did not pass, it was not condemned by the Administration and was considered rather amusing by those of the radical left wing who believe in censorship and try to sabotage the free and more or less independent daily press of the country. To keep the record straight and declare itself on that proposal, the New Deal should have hit it a faint lick of repudiation, for Mr. Minton offered it in connection with a cherished project of the New Deal.

Court packing, the purge, the misuse of tax information for political coercion and the cynical adjuration of Mr. Aubrey Williams to a quasi-Communist group of relief employes to "keep your friends in power" all are part of the pattern of precedents which might be put to awful uses by a government elected in a nationalistic, fascistic glow of spirit comparable to the expression of hope and faith which elected Mr. Roosevelt the first time.

Life's Darkest Moment



Japan And The Axis

By Barnet Nover

A Triangle Has Three Sides

EUROPE and Asia, as every schoolboy knows, constitute an unbroken land mass, with Europe only the western peninsula of Asia or Asia the eastern extension of Europe.

What is not so clearly recognized is that the two continents are linked in a great many other ways as well. What happens in Europe has a direct and not infrequently an immediate bearing on events in the Far East and what happens in the Far East can have grave repercussions in Europe.

During the past eight years, to go back no further, the world has been vouchsafed many notable illustrations of this interlocking relationship between European and Asiatic developments.

There was, for instance, Japan's Manchurian adventure which began in the fall of 1931. Nothing could be more remote from the direct interests of the European powers. Yet the uncontested entry of Japanese troops into Mukden lighted a fuse which was to result in a world-shaking explosion.

FIRST MUSSOLINI and then Hitler were quick to follow Japan's example. On the other hand, Japan has made very good use of the preoccupation of such European powers as Great Britain and France with developments in Europe to extend her authority on the mainland of Asia. In turn, Japan's actions encouraged the axis powers by demonstrating to them that the European democracies were in no mood to fight back.

A year and a half ago the three expansionist powers formally regularized their interdependent policies by creating the so-called Berlin-Rome-Tokyo triangle.

JUST WHAT the creation of this triangle involved has never been very clear. The admitted purpose of the combination was to fight communism and the Comintern. But the victim of the triangle was never Russia. It was China. It was Austria. It was Czecho-Slovakia. And there has been a strong suspicion that the ultimate aims of Japan, Germany and Italy, respectively, involved the seizure of territory and the destruction of rights and interests claimed by the European democracies.

This Japan was not prepared to admit. Nor was Germany or Italy. Their program has been to move by easy stages, eliminating one by one the obstacles that barred the way to domination and whose destruction may make possible a challenge to Great Britain and France in the Far East, on the one hand, and in Europe and Africa, on the other.

UNTIL NOW the triangle powers have found it possible to carry out this program without benefit of any formal alliance and without calling on each other for much more than benevolent neutrality.

Now, however, benevolent neutrality is proving insufficient. The western democracies have been aroused to the realities of the world situation. They have begun to take action to prevent the prairie fire of aggression from spreading. And with this in mind they have swallowed prejudice and pride and have agreed to ally themselves with Russia.

THIS DEVELOPMENT has irritated and alarmed the Japanese. The proposed Anglo-French-Russian alliance is not believed to involve any pooling of efforts in the Far East. But that does not make it any less dangerous for Japan.

Insofar as such a triple entente may serve to keep Germany and Italy in hand and, if only for a time check aggression in Europe, it will make possible a stronger stand by Great Britain and France and also by Russia in the Far East.

Already, in fact, the British and French attitude toward Japan's pretensions to overlordship in Eastern Asia has stiffened. Japan's seizure of the international settlement at Amoy has not met with the same meek acquiescence that followed the seizure of Hainan and the Spratly Islands. There is similar resistance to the efforts of Japan to interfere with foreign shipping in the China Sea and to her demands on the International Settlement and French concession at Shanghai.

BUT THIS VERY show of strength has spurred the Japanese to take what they can while there is still time, to complete the task of establishing a Japanese hegemony over all eastern Asia before the western powers can do very much about it.

That is why, almost for the first time, there is talk of a military occupation of the foreign settlements and concessions in China. For if Japan does not act now she may not have another chance to do so. In that connection, the Japanese feel they still have an unplayed trump. For perfectly sound reasons Japan has refused to make a direct military alliance with Germany and Italy. That would destroy all the past advantages of the triangle and create some very real hazards. Bound by such an alliance, Japan would have to gear her policies to German and Italian desires. That might prove awkward and even dangerous.

Nonetheless, the Tokyo government may take the step. Her civilian leaders do not favor it. The navy is said to be opposed. The foreign office is, by and large, hostile. But the army wants it. And the army wants it because it believes that a German-Italian-Japanese alliance might intimidate the western democracies and Russia.

What Japan wants is a free hand in eastern Asia. And the Japanese war lords may believe that the way to get a free hand is publicly to link Japan's fate irrevocably with those of the other aggressor nations. But the day when such a bluff would work may now be over.

Japanese Deny Plan to Blockade Coast of China

Shanghai, May 29 (AP).—A Japanese naval spokesman indicated tonight the Japanese did not plan to repeat such incidents as those of last week in which three third-power liners were boarded and searched off the China Coast.

The spokesman denied there was a general blockade, as the navy had indicated. He asserted the ban was against Chinese ships only. In explaining the boarding incidents he said there had been "flagrant abuse of third-power flags and it was sometimes necessary to verify a ship's registry."

The steamers stopped were the British Ranpura, the French Aramis and the German Sauerland.

American Buildings Bombed.

Peiping, May 29 (AP).—The United States Embassy today made representations to Japanese authorities here concerning bombing of a small building at Swatow belonging to the Marshal Field Co. of Chicago, May 5 and of installations of the Standard Oil Co. of New York in Hupeh Province, May 6.

Coast Guard Grads Hear Morgenthau

New London, Conn., May 29 (AP). Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau, today lauded the Coast Guard "as a service in the spirit of democracy" and "first and last a service for peace."

Morgenthau told the members of the graduating class at the United States Coast Guard Academy, that "your pennant is a symbol of peace" and "you who serve under that pennant are the ambassadors of the United States on the high seas."

Battle Now Is On

TIMES ALMOST without number during the past five years this column has described the battle of ideologies in Europe, between communism and Nazi-fascism, and raised the question whether the battle would be duplicated here. For example, September 21, 1936, this column said:

"Here are five out of the six large countries of Europe (together with some smaller countries) subjected to one or the other of the new conceptions—or else battlegrounds on which the two contend.

"For America the question is: Can we ride through this storm without . . . becoming a battleground on which communism and Nazi-fascism contend. It is a living question and a growing one."

The question is answered now. By the revelation of the Dies committee last week, and by abundant other evidence, we know that the battle between Nazi-fascism and communism is on in America, in much the same form in which it has gone on in Europe during some 20 years past.

For understanding of what now faces America, for light which may help to guide average Americans toward the attitude they will wish to take, I summarize very briefly how the world-wide conflict arose. I have done this before, many time, but no amount of repetition can be too much.

It began in Russia in 1917. There, Lenin and Trotsky set up communism. With communism securely fastened upon Russia, they set out to establish it throughout the world. To country after country they sent agents and money. In no country, however, excepting Russia, did they succeed in establishing communism. But in country after country their attempt reached the preliminary state of chaos and paralysis.

A Counter-Movement Against Communism

AT THAT stage, in all the countries, arose a counter-Communist movement, an alternative to communism. In Italy the counter-Communist movement took the name "fascism," and established itself. In Germany, the counter-Communist movement took the name "Nazism," and rooted itself firmly.

It should be borne in mind that Naziism and fascism are substantially identical. The appropriate name for the alternative to communism is "Nazi-fascism."

In Spain the same pattern was duplicated—first, a movement toward communism and other forms of radicalism. To combat this arose Nazi-fascism, which after civil war, was successful. In Spain the world-wide nature of the conflict became vivid. To help the Communists came men, material and money from Russia. To help the Nazi-Fascist side, Germany and Italy sent soldiers and material.

In country after country, this has been the common pattern: first an attempt at communism; second, the arising of Nazi-fascism; third, struggle between the two; finally, victory for Nazi-fascism.

In the United States, events so far have conformed to the world pattern. First arose the movement toward communism. It was active here as early as the 1920's; for some Americans, chiefly intellectuals, at that time, admired the Communist experiment in Russia and wished to imitate it in one degree or another in America. But during the 1920's, communism in America could make no headway against the material prosperity that the country enjoyed. With the depression, however, and the widespread economic and spiritual discontent which the depression caused, the movement toward communism in America grew. It penetrated into some schools, some labor unions; even, very strangely, some church organizations. In the ferment caused by economic misery, and as the 1932 election approached, some degree of the Communist philosophy infected politics.

Both Repugnant To Americans

THAT PROGRESS of the Communist philosophy, increasing activity and daring by its exponents, should give rise to the counter-Communist movement of Nazi-fascism, was as certain in America as in other countries. That this has happened, the country now knows.

For Americans, loyal to our own system, the course is clear. To them, both communism and Nazi-fascism will be seen as repugnant. They will be helped in their thinking if they understand that the two are much alike, that the appropriate name for both is "authoritarian government"—and that it is authoritarian government against which America must be on guard. The name of the American system is individualism—individualism as a form of society, expressing itself through democracy as a political method, and in a republic as our form of government. On individualism our whole structure of government and society rests.

By remembering that, and by contrasting individualism with authoritarian government, the average American will have a test by which he can guide himself. Individualism means the greatest practicable degree of liberty for the individual citizen to follow his own way of life without interference by government. The greatest practicable immunity of the individual from regulation by government, from compulsion by government—that is the American ideal. Anything that invades that ideal is a step toward authoritarian government.

To preserve the ideal of individualism vigilantly is a better course for the average American than to take sides in the contest now on between two kinds of authoritarian government.

Secretary Hull's Neutrality Program

THERE HAS BEEN some criticism of Secretary Hull because he has waited so long before taking a position on the neutrality act. But his caution has, it seems to me, been wise, and the effect of the delay has been salutary. The delay has greatly improved the position in Europe, and the discussion before the Congressional committees has resulted in a genuine clarification of American policy.

The reason for believing that the delay here has improved the position in Europe can be understood when we remember that nearly three months ago Great Britain stood helpless and irresolute while Hitler tore up the Munich agreement, overran Bohemia and Moravia, occupied Memel, and threatened Poland, Lithuania and Rumania. Since that happened the British and French have pulled themselves together, have constructed a great defensive alliance, and have made it clear that they mean to defend their vital interests. This has required the doing of a great many things that Mr. Chamberlain hated to do, the giving of guarantees to Poland, Rumania and Greece, the making of an alliance with Turkey and with Russia, the adoption of conscription and the placing of British industry on a war footing.

The total effect of this reversal of British policy has been an acknowledgement of the fact that the vital interests of Great Britain in Europe can be defended only by Great Britain with such allies as she can find in Europe. Had the United States repealed the arms embargo two months ago, it is probable that this action would have been greatly misunderstood in London as meaning that the United States could be counted on to fight alongside of Britain in case the axis struck toward the west.

It is a reasonable assumption that if Mr. Chamberlain had had any reason for thinking that he could count on the United States as an ally, he would never have committed himself in Warsaw, Bucharest, Athens, Angora, much less in Moscow. This would have been a dangerous illusion on his part. Mr. Hull's delay, whether calculated or not, has compelled Mr. Chamberlain to accept the fact that the restoration of a balance of power in Europe is a European responsibility, and to act accordingly.

Delay Produces Excellent Results

The delay has also had a good effect on Hitler and Mussolini. Back in March the two most prominent proposals before the committees were the Pittman "cash and carry" bill and the Thomas amendment to name "the aggressor." Neither bill commanded general support. Both had grave defects which would have caused all manner of confusion and entangling difficulties. Had Mr. Hull sponsored either proposal it would probably have been defeated because in the test of debate it could not have carried conviction.

It would have been very dangerous indeed to have this debate with the prospect of eventual defeat at a time when Hitler was on the march and the European opposition was as yet unorganized. It would have furnished one more reason, and a very powerful one, for continuing the campaign which so very nearly brought on a European war at the beginning of April. The delay here left Hitler and Mussolini uncertain as to what the United States might do, and convinced them, we may fairly assume, that if they suddenly bombed London and Paris and overran Holland and Switzerland, the reaction in America would be terrific.

So by depriving Mr. Chamberlain of the illusion that he could count on America, by depriving Hitler of the illusion that he could count on hermetically sealed American isolation, a most necessary and healthy realism has been promoted in both camps. The interest of the United States has been served in that war has been postponed, and perhaps averted; if war has not been averted, our interest has also been served in that the resistance has been organized. The nations which share with us the control of our real frontiers in the Atlantic Ocean and in the Pacific cannot now be defeated by a knockout blow. Our own security is consequently much greater.

If War Breaks Out It May Last Long

Now that Great Britain is committed in Europe and now that there is a balance of power among European states, the American interest will best be served by a prompt clarification of the neutrality act. For while the alliances that have been formed in Europe may postpone, perhaps prevent, a world war, there is no certainty that they will. All that is certain now is that if war breaks out, it will be a long war and that it will be fought all over Europe, Africa, Asia, and on all the oceans.

The existing neutrality act puts the United States in a most awkward position. It gives to Hitler the power, by the simple act of declaring war or fomenting a revolution, to stop our trade in a long list of commodities, to divert our shipping, to decide where Americans may travel, and to disorganize the financial basis of our foreign trade. Never in our own history, and never in the history of any independent state, has a legislative body voluntarily given such power over its own affairs to a foreign government. And never has a nation professing peace offered such an inducement to an aggressor, never has it put such a premium on going to war or on starting a revolution.

Aims Of Congress Are Outlined

Though this is the effect, it was, of course, not the intention of the American Congress. The intention was to keep the United States from being entangled against its will and contrary to its national interest in a European war. The purpose of Congress in enacting these embargoes and prohibitions was to keep private citizens and private commercial interests from getting so entangled in a foreign war and suffering such injuries that America would have to go to war to protect or avenge them.

Now Mr. Hull's program carries out this purpose as exactly and as efficiently as it is possible to do it. Instead of giving to foreign nations the power to keep Americans out of any part of the world that they choose to name, Mr. Hull proposes to have the United States decide what parts of the world are too dangerous for American travelers, American ships, American exporters. That is the essence of the Hull plan, and once understood, it is the plainest common sense.

Hull's Purposes Are Explained

The difference between his plan and the existing law is that Mr. Hull proposes to have the United States, not some foreign nation, determine where the fighting is serious enough to warrant forbidding Americans to travel and to trade. Under the present law, Japan or Germany or Italy can regulate our trade and intercourse with, for example, Australia or Canada, just by declaring that they are at war.

Did anyone seriously mean to transfer so vital a part of American sovereignty to Tokyo or to Berlin? Obviously not, but unhappily that is the state of the existing law.

Do Not Abandon Interests Anywhere

Mr. Hull's plan not only recovers American sovereignty, but it goes much further than the law as it has stood since May 1 in preventing private interests from getting us into trouble abroad. Under his plan we decide where the trouble exists. Having defined the area, we forbid Americans to travel in that zone of combat, we forbid American ships to enter it, we forbid American-owned goods to be transported through it, and we forbid Americans to lend money to anyone who is intending to carry goods through that zone.

But what we do not do is to stop trading with any part of the world that is theoretically, though not actually, in the zone of the fighting. We do not abandon our interests anywhere at the mere behest of foreign governments. We do not tie up our ships in port or let them go only where foreign governments choose to say we may let them go. We do not let foreign governments decide whether we may sell this American product but not that one. We do not let foreign governments decide whether nations they mean to attack may get the arms to defend themselves.

Proposal Fixes Definite Line

Fairly considered, examined on its merits, I submit that the Hull plan does everything that men like Senator Nye have sought to accomplish. Though the method is somewhat different, the purpose is the same in that it fixes a definite line which cuts the entanglement of American private interests in foreign wars. That is what Mr. Nye has been after, and that principle has conquered.

The only difference is, first, that Mr. Hull cuts the entanglement at the zone of actual danger whereas Mr. Nye would cut it at the three-mile limit; and, second, that Mr. Hull would have our own Government, not foreign governments, decide where Americans shall travel and shall trade, whereas Mr. Nye would, unintentionally, of course, surrender that sovereign power to foreign governments.

Duce Won't Start Any War to Get Land, Aide Says

Rome, May 29 (U.P.).—Premier Mussolini does not intend to take any initiative in precipitating action which might endanger European peace, a Fascist official who is in almost daily contact with Il Duce said today.

He added that Italy has no reason to believe Germany would precipitate matters over her quarrel with Poland, and made it clear Italy does not expect war to grow out of Italy's demands on France.

He discounted rumors Italy and Germany presently would present a joint demand for a European "new deal," and said Italy's claims regarding Tunisia and other North African territory were of long standing and that there was no great hurry about reaching a solution.

Congress Votes To Retire Army Horses and Mules

A well earned retirement in green pastures is to be provided for those battle-scarred, four-footed veterans, the Army horse and mule.

Under legislation passed by the Senate yesterday the War Department may transfer its old horses and mules to reputable humane societies in whose car they will be put to pasture for the rest of their lives. Except for famous war horses or those with exceptional records, the present law requires that animals no longer fit for active service be shot.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Elmer Twitchell Takes The Stand

(Being an imaginary appearance before the Dies committee.)

Q.—So you think there is danger of a revolution, Mr. Twitchell?

A.—It is practically at hand. It's merely a question whether the plotters will take over the Army and Navy before or after lunch.

Q.—On what do you base this startling conclusion?

A.—I've had a bartender as a confidential agent in a prominent New York club for months.

Q.—And this bartender has been in possession of startling facts?

A.—I never saw anything like it. He knew Lou Gehrig was to be benched almost as soon as it appeared in the newspapers.

Q.—He was a perfect agent?

A.—Not perfect. He got stubborn after a while and wouldn't tell me much, but I knew he talked in his sleep and I put a dictograph in his room.

Q.—Isn't it a fact that he changed his room?

A.—Yes, but the fellow who occupied it talked, too, and we got a record of what he said.

Q.—It didn't have any bearing on a revolution, did it?

A.—No, but I'm not fussy. I'll take anything I can get.

Q.—Who is behind this revolution of which you speak?

Q.—The circus gorilla?

Q.—On what basis do you accuse Gargantua?

A.—We found him reading messages in code on the inside of a banana skin. The messages were from a retired admiral who says America is to be taken over inside of ten days, daylight saving.

Q.—Don't you think the admiral may be making a monkey out of you?

A.—Considering what he did to Gargantua it is possible.

Q.—Why would the conspirators want Gargantua in the plot to take over our Government?

A.—About everybody else has been spoken for.

Q.—Are there any Army officers in your plot?

A.—No, we've gone better than that. We have some girl drum majors.

Q.—Why are girl drum majors better for revolutionary purposes?

A.—They get a greater following anywhere.

Here Mr. Twitchell jumped to his feet and yelled, "Don't you order me to sit down!"

"You've been sitting down all the time," said the committeeman.

"Well, then don't order me to stand up," thundered Elmer.

"No," replied Elmer.

A clash having been thus averted they had to be satisfied merely to pose for the newsreels.

Mrs. Elmer Twitchell, who has not missed one word of the stories of the King and Queen's travels, put her paper aside today and remarked, "Well, it's a great way to reduce."

A chain store manager won $140,000 in the Derby sweepstakes and an employe of a sugar refinery won the same amount. Maybe they will go off together and just shout at waiters and waitresses, "No lemon. Just lots of tea and plenty of sugar."

The Federal Radio Commission has ruled that all radio broadcasts going outside America must "reflect the culture of the country and promote international good will, understanding and co-operation." Why it wants to show so much prejudice against America and give only foreign listeners a break is a mystery.

How, by the way, would a radio station arrange a program to reflect the culture of America? Would a true or false program reflect it better than a hobby lobby? Would Kate Smith, the Philharmonic and Charlie McCarthy do it jointly and completely? What would a boss do about an international broadcast if he had to choose between a talk on world politics with Rudy Vallee and Senator Borah as guest artists and an address on America's war policies with Mae West and Shirley Temple as guest artists?

"The American Way" Is Not to Tour Country

Historical Pageant Will Live and Die in Gotham; Howard Hawks Creates Another Aviation Hit; News Notes and Gossip of the Playhouse

SO, IF YOU WANT TO SEE "The American Way," the spectacular, historic pageant-play, starring Fredric March and Florence Eldredge, it will be necessary to journey to the Center Theater, New York, to do so. No attempt will be made to tour "The American Way," which has been establishing new box-office records in New York ever since it opened last January.

BELL

This decision was reached last week by Sam H. Harris and Max Gordon, producers of the piece, after long consideration of all the problems involved. Two factors entered into their determination to let the life of the production end with the last performance in New York, which, from present indications, will be long deferred.

The physical production, which was built for the enormous stage of the Center and was constructed with the idea of utilizing the elaborate series of backstage elevators in that playhouse for quick scene changes, conceivably could be cut down, but it was felt that such a reduction in size would militate against the complete success of the play on the road. More important than this, however, is the size of the company. Slightly more than 250 persons are concerned in the ensemble scenes, as revealed at the Center, and the skillfully directed movements of this large number of people has had much to do with the dramatic forcefulness of many of the scenes.

Ignoring all thought of mechanical difficulties on tour, the cost of transporting so huge a production would be almost prohibitive in itself.

One suspects that the producers of "The American Way" still bear in mind some of the lessons that were learned when an abridged edition of "The Great Waltz" was sent touring—with results that were sometimes happy and sometimes not.

It is a high tribute to "The American Way" and its stars that the New York run alone will be sufficient to "pay off." That rarely happens.

Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, westernunions in some haste how sorry he is that he was unable to afford the drama desks a preview of "The Mikakdo" and then add that it will open on Fifteenth street this Thursday. This is the Jniversal Technicolor picturization of the "old warhorse" of the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, in which Kenny Baker sings the role of Naki-Poo, surrounded by members of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Co., comparatively recent visitors to the National.

Columbia has gone and done it again in "Only Angels Have Wings." Or perhaps it were better said that Howard Hawks has gone and done it again, for this is Hawks' first picture for Columbia under a producer-director agreement and it is the Hawks penchant for this sort of thing that completely dominates the production. Not only did Mr. Hawks produce and direct, but he also wrote the story on which the screen play by Jules Furthman was based. That is getting pretty thoroughly into the fundamentals of any picture for any man.

The background of "Only Angels Have Wings," of course, is aviation. Not the flossy, streamlined aviation of the Clipper ships and the big transcontinental passenger planes, but the hard-pressed business of carrying on a commercial airline in a dingy little banana town, Barranca, in South America, where the equipment was out of date and operating funds at low ebb. There are some faint reminders of both "Ceiling Zero" and "Dawn Patrol"—both of which Mr. Hawks also directed, I believe—in this subject, although "Only Angels Have Wings" is so robust in content and treatment, so novel in its romantic and emotional appeals and so superlatively acted that it takes rank among the finest aviation pictures ever made on the sheer strength of its own virtues.

There are many outstanding performances in Mr. Hawks' latest adventure in the air. Three of them are of genuine distinction. These are contributed by Cary Grant, as the boss of the field; Thomas Mitchell, as his right-hand man, whom he finally has to ground for failing eyesight, and Richard Barthelmess, as the renegade flier who not only makes good in his profession, but here makes so splendid a "comeback" as to insure his future on the screen in this renewal of his career.

"Only Angels Have Wings" runs a full two hours. It didn't seem that long in the Warner Brothers' air-conditioned projection-room yesterday afternoon. Better not miss it when it opens at the Earle on Friday.

Two thousand of last year's subscribing members of the Theater Guild and American Theater Society of Washington already have renewed their seat locations for next year's subscription season of six plays at the National—the largest number at this time of year in the history of the local organization. The books of the society now are open to the general public. It is expected that by June 10 charts showing seat locations will be available to prospective subscribers at the office of Bess Davis Schreiner, subscription director, in the National. So now you know.

Following the last presentations of Paderewski in "Moonlight Sonata" and George Arliss in "The Last Gentleman," Gracie Fields and Victor McLaglen, in "We're Going to Be Rich," will be shown in a late preview at the Little Theater tonight. The regular engagement will begin tomorrow morning on the full, all-day schedule. This picture marks the screen debut in this country of England's highest-paid and most popular singing comedienne. Miss Fields "has a way with her" that makes he preeminence in her native land wholly comprehensible. Vic McLaglen is not so bad in this one, either. In fact, he is extremely good. So is Brian Donlevy, with whom we recently lunched aboard the "Union Pacific Special."

The spirit of festive celebration which will mark Washington's welcome to King George and Queen Elizabeth of England will be reflected in the stage revue being planned by Production Manager Harry Anger for next week at the Earle. It is to be called "Command Performance." A special feature will be the presentation of the 16 Earle Roxyettes in "Changing of the Guard," a unique military routine in which the girls will don the tall shakos of the Royal Guard in London. I doubt if Their Majesties will be able to find time to see it.

Famous-Last-Words Note.

Happy holiday.

Three of the 'Angels' Who Had Wings!

RICHARD BARTHELMESS, CARY GRANT, THOMAS MITCHELL, as they appear in the trio of pivotal roles in Columbia's production of "Only Angels Have Wings," opening on the screen at the Earle Theater on Friday. The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 29.

THIS IS what happened when James Roosevelt dined with Their Majesties, at Windsor Castle; Jimmy arrived at Windsor, was ushered to his room, where a butler told him just what to wear and when to come down to the dining room . . . The other dinner guests were Prime Minister and Mrs. Chamberlain and Ambassador and Mrs. Joe Kennedy . . . Kennedy's room was directly above Jimmy's, and so the President's son found the way upstairs and talked to Kennedy until the dinner hour. On the way back to his room, Jimmy was lost—and a flunkey led him to his quarters . . . At the dinner table four butlers served the seven guests. Jimmy was startled by the solid gold service and by the fact that when each guest finished one course the next was served immediately—without waiting for the other guests to finish the same course. Roosevelt therefore was embarrassed at finding himself still eating fish, while the Queen was finishing her entree . . . Chamberlain and Queen Elizabeth, however, helped Jimmy catch up to them by starting a 15-minute conversation, not about the foreign situation—but about Huey Long.

MRS MERVYN LEROY was at Doctors Hospital for two weeks, trying to increase her weight . . . Walter Hart, the attorney whose recording—of a conversation between a witness and John Amen's office—was mentioned at the trial of Judge Martin, has 35 such recordings . . . The Saturday Evening Post will get a lucky break—featuring an article about submarine divers . . . while the salvage work on the Squalus will be attempted . . . John Gunther, the foreign correspondent, will go to Europe with an assignment from Reader's Digest. "You're going to Europe again," Dorothy Parker told him. "John—you're in a rut."

JUST BEFORE the metropolitan golf tournament started, Sammy Snead and Horton Smith were asked to pose for a tea ad. "The idea," spieled the ad executive, "is to show you boys drinking tea—and then proceeding to the first tee. Get it? From Tea-to-Tee" . . . "How much," asked Smith, "do we get for this Tea- to-Tee ad?" . . . "Nothing," was the reply, "but this'll be publicity" . . . "You tell that outfit," said Snead, "that we believe in good money—not bad puns."

HARRY RICHMAN, singing at the magnificent International Casino, again proved to be America's foremost cafe entertainer . . . The putty nose Henry Fonda used in "Young Mr. Lincoln" is so large that technicians stopped the screening every 20 minutes, because it wilted under the Kleig lights. "Fonda complained: "I'm tired of having everybody's business stuck in my nose" . . . John Philip Sousa 3d, whose illustrious grandfather opened the first Manhattan Beach bandstand, will play there June 3—with a swing band . . . Gordon, the convicted firebug, who had been removed by District Attorney Dewey to the Bronx jail now is at the West Side jail—because of a fight with Convict Bendix.

ON A HOLLYWOOD-bound train Mark Hellinger and Ted Husing played a horse-racing game, while another passenger watched . . . "You can't win," the stranger assured Ted, "because the figures are against you. You're bound to keep losing" . . . Husing, persistent, paid no heed to this warning, made his own calculations—and lost, until he was broke . . . The man whose warnings about this mathematical certainty Ted wouldn't heed was Leon Henderson, the New Deal economist and figure expert for the Government.

IN 1927 one of the first talkie voices recorded by Warner Bros. was that of the late Cantor Josef Rosenblatt. His son, Leo Rose, now manages Warner's Hollywood Theater on Broadway . . . Nancy Carroll, prettier than ever, now has more autograph hunters following her than any New York celebrity . . . The Russian-born Andre Kostelanetz, who was naturalized some years ago, now is sure he's a real American—because he visited the Russian Pavilion at the fair and felt no pride of homeland . . . "To me," he confessed, "it was the same as looking at the Peruvian or Swedish Pavilion."

WHILE "The Young in Heart" was being screened by Selznick, Joe Swerling and Michael Blankforth were told: "Maude Adams is coming in at 5 o'clock to turn down a role in this picture. If we can change it suitably enough maybe she'll accept" . . . At 4:30 the writing team found a satisfactory solution and brought it to Selznick's office . . . There they found the producer with Gene Fowler and Lewis Milestone—also working on the same problem . . . The Swerling and Blankforth team insisted that their solution was better than Fowler and Milestone's. "Gene," said Swerling, "you were once a newspaper man. Now if you were an editor and both these stories were brought to you, which would you put on the front page?" . . . "Yours," admitted Fowler . . . "That settles it," Selznick ruled, "I'll use neither story. We'll continue as is."

Wearing Hat At Work Aids Quick Escape

DorothyYost Frequently Tires of It All and Leaves Hurriedly

By Frederick C. Othman.

United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, May 29.—Dorothy Yost, of the newspapering Yosts, is the only Hollywood scenarist we know who does all her work with her hat on. This, she reported today, is so that she can get up and walk out of whatever studio in which she's working, with the minimum of confusion.

It used to be that she labored on movie literature bare-headed. And when she'd get fed up on Hollywood and all its works, she'd leave her desk in haste. She lost many a handsome bonnet that way.

There aren't many women among the top screen writers. So we figured that by interviewing Miss Yost, maybe we'd get some hints on how to break into the business for the benefit of women who constantly are writing in, saying they'd like to be movie authors, and wondering how to start.

This seems to have been a mistake. Miss Yost eased into the industry so inperceptibly that she can't remember exactly when it was that she became a writer.

Of Newspaper Clan

Her uncle was Casper S. Yost, the St. Louis editor. Her father was Robert M., the Los Angeles Ditto, while her brother, Robert M. Jr., was one of Los Angeles' star reporters. Dorothy worked on the late Los Angeles Express. When her father became elderly, he took over a small paper at Santa Barbara, and his daughter went with him as his assistant.

"I remember it was during the world war," she said, "and one of my jobs was to post the battle bulletins on the front window. It was an exciting time for me—and one day I remember that I nearly posted a bulletin on the biggest indian I ever saw. He was in full regalia and he was standing with his nose pressed against the window.

"He turned out to be a movie actor, working for one of the early companies which had its studios at Santa Barbara. So we sat down on the curb and had a long talk about the picture business. It sounded good to me."

Got Job With Triangle

Through a friend of a friend of a friend, Dorothy wangled herself a job as assistant to the head of the story department of the old Triangle Film Co.

"He knew the company was about to fail," she said. "I didn't and that was lucky for me. After a few months he quit and I sort of took over his job, mainly because the company had no money to hire a new story editor. I did a lot of other things, too. Almost everything except sweep up the place."

That was in 1919. From reading scripts for silent pictures, she turned to revising them. And from that she went on to write them from scratch.

"Even in those days," she said, "I had to write dialogue for the stories. That was because there were so many lip readers in the audiences who wrote the studios, complaining about what the actors said on the screen. They'd crack jokes during their tender love scenes and some of these jokes veered past the indelicate."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 29.—John Wayne and Claire Trevor, who made the hit of their careers in "Stagecoach," will be reunited in "Pennsylvania Uprising" at RKO. And just as important as these two romancers will be Sir Cedric Hardwicke, who was also signed today, making this a whopping cast. It's the opinion around the studio that this should make a star of Claire Trevor and if the role is that good, it's a cinch RKO will want an option on a Trevor contract. Why not—she is a fine little actress and they could use a dramatic specialist over there since K. Hepburn waned.

LOUELLA PARSONS

As you've probably heard, "Pennsylvania Uprising" is the exciting revolutionary opus dealing with the revolt of the Pennsylvania settlers ten years before the battle of Lexington. William Seiter will direct and P. J. Wolfson will not only produce, but the screen play is credited to him as well.

When I saw "The Young in Heart" I thought Richard Carlson was on his way to movie stardom. With his Scotch accent, young Carlson was something to bait the hearts of the ladies, indeed. But somehow or other, he didn't make such a vivid impression in "The Duke of West Point." Be that as it may, he's going to get another chance to be romantic again in "These Glamour Girls" at M-G-M. This yarn, which started out rather unpretentiously, seems to be gathering luster all the time. Lew Ayres and Lana Turner have the top spots, Tom Brown and Ann Rutherford contribute another duet and there's talk that Anita Louise will join the cast as Carlson's "Glamour Girl" sweetheart.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 29.—Now that our Hollywood women have snared their men, what with all the recent marriages, our producers are following through on the screen. Yes, sir, it's a woman's year all right! Why, there is Norma Shearer standing on her head to the delight of the onlookers in "The Women," Hedy Lamarr going native in "The Lady of the Tropics" and Madeleine Carroll answering the question "Are Husbands Necessary?"

HOPPER

And just look at the titles of the other pictures coming up: "Angel in Furs," "Hotel for Women," "Forgotten Women," "Morern Cinderella," "The Old Maid," "A Woman Is the Judge," Edith Cavell," "Fifth Avenue Girl," "Little Mother" and "Daughters Couragous." The year 1939 looks like a woman's year. Well, what year isn't?

The only producer who seems to be holding out against them is Cecil B. DeMille, who has definitely abandoned "Esther." He told me it was entirely too controversial a subject, that Biblical story about Esther, daughter of a Jew who became a queen. She and her adopted father, Mordecai, also a Jew, slay all their enemies in the kingdom and become all-powerful.

Who would have thought an old Biblical tale could have so much dynamite that a twentieth century movie producer wouldn't dare touch it for the screen?

Wish I could take everyone who yells for war on Selznick's backlot to see the Atlanta depot Civil War battle scenes. There are hundreds of dummies lying on red, dusty slopes. Extras without arms, legs—ghastly real. Other living extras smeared with blood, dirty faces, matted beards, filthy clothes. There was nothing inspiring about it. And if it looks as realistic on the screen in Technicolor, as it did to the eye, it will be a strong plea for peace.

Even Vivien Leigh and Belle Watling as water girls didn't pretty it up. Vivien told me she'd lost three pounds in a week doing those horror scenes. She's one girl who insists on looking what she's supposed to be—filthy, ragged, bloody. Make no mistake about it—there's a swell actress.

When Vic Fleming took a week off to rest up in a hospital, he worried so when he was shown his X-ray, he said, "These are no good. I want to see the daily rushes." The doctor just shook his head, advised him to go back onto the picture. He'd get him when it was over!

Another one they'll get when it's over is the producer, David Selznick. He's headed for a honey of a break-down. So far, he hasn't taken a day off.

I came upon Slicker the seal, star of "Spawn of the North" on the Marx brothers set. Slicker was flipping around having a grand time. I asked an assistant if he was there for a test.

"No."

"Work?"

"No."

"Oh, visiting too?"

"No," screamed the assistant, "He came for an interview." Then turned to Slicker's trainer and said, "Look, you've got to take that seal home and wait for a call. He won't work for a week. We've got enough on our hands with the Marx brothers."

At which Slicker and I flipped off the set.

Bob Taylor and Spencer Tracy are the problem boys at Metro. How long can their beards grow for "Northwest Passage" without offending you ladies? "Of Beards and Men" is as important in Hollywood as "Do you take cream in your coffee?"

All work, no play. When Director Anatole Litvak is doing a picture he occupies the beach house while Miriam holds forth on the hilltop.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Shy, Lonely Boy of 19 Would 'Develop Personality' By Exchanging Letters With Girls; How to Begin?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem is no doubt similar to that of many other boys. I am the quiet type that never runs around much with girls. One reason is because I have worked hard in school and haven't had much leisure time. But now that I am 19, I feel that it is time for me to be developing my personality. I have tried recently to go out with girls, but none of them will go with me because I am shy. I am so lonesome and do want to get to know some girls. If you know any girls who would care to correspond with me, it might solve a mutual problem of loneliness. Sincerely, VIRGINIAN.

DEAR VIRGINIAN: My heart melts with pity (no fooling!) at your plight. But I have made it the invariable rule of this column to refrain from promoting any exchange of correspondence between persons who are strangers to each other and to me. The risk seems too great, inasmuch as the desperately lonely are sometimes driven to take long chances in the matter of scraping closer acquaintance, and I should not like to be even an innocent party to anyone's disappointment or undoing at the hands of another.

But I am moved to make a special recommendation in your case. As a country boy (which I take it you are, judging from the signature and postmark of your letter), and a shy one at that, with all too few social opportunities, you are in a tight spot when it comes to trying to "develop your personality" through association, mental or social, with the opposite sex. Yes, I think you deserve special consideration.

Here is my suggestion: Get hold of some recent issues of the Saturday Review of Literature (price, 10 cents a copy), which you probably can find on file at your local library, turn to the "Personals" columns in the back of these magazines, and see if you can't dig up one or more congenial correspondents of either sex. Leafing through back numbers of this magazine obligingly lent me by The Post's literary editor, I find (at this writing) such stimulating advertisements as these:

"Is there a man, college graduate, who would enjoy corresponding with a woman in middle thirties, etc.?" And, "Whimsical young woman desires correspondence with those interested in art and nonfiction writing." And "New Yorker, male, 27, lately overworked, seeks stimulating correspondence." And, "Now that April's here, if you wish, I could write you some enchanting lines. You must be quite grown—plus 40. Alice." And, "Young lady, 27, varied interests . . . would welcome correspondence with friendly, not too clever, young man." And, "Young man, New Yorker, would like to hear from others interested in outdoors, literature, music."

If none of the advertisements quite measure up to what you want, you may insert your own appeal, stating your qualifications, preferences and hopes, which should bring an avalanche of replies—and the rest is up to you. Interesting intellectual alliances really are developed by this medium, I am told. For instance, the wife of a professor in a Middle Western university told me, on the occasion of an Easter vacation visit to Washington, that one of her neighbors (a young widow of adventurous mind and aspiring spirit), had struck up a friendship-by-correspondence with a distinguished Eastern scientist (a bachelor, by the way) through this medium. As a result of advertising for correspondence, this woman had drawn a heavy mail, from which she selected three letters as most promising, and with whose writers she has since maintained a friendly exchange. M. H.

Repetitious Question

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As a reader of your column, I have noticed at various times that you have supplied your correspondents with an address where legal advice may be obtained free of charge. I am separated from my husband and would like to know what steps to take in order to secure a divorce. As I am unemployed, and hence unable to pay a lawyer's fee, I would appreciate any information you can give me. ADVICE SEEKER.

Whiskered Answer

DEAR A. S.: It is both amusing and vexatious, as well as a sorry commentary upon the mental retentiveness of my readers, that this question should confront me so constantly. In spite of the fact that I have listed the name and address of the Legal Aid Bureau, 1409 L street northwest, telephone NAtional 8674, in this column at least once a month (by conservative average) for the last five years, I am perpetually required to furnish the same whiskered information, time and again, to persons who admittedly "heard it the first time," but failed to make a note of it. If it is true that the Lord helps those who help themselves, it may be small wonder that these inquirers stand so sorely in need of others' help. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

The Homemaker

Cucumber Uses In Summer Are Varied

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

CUCUMBERS are quick vegetables and in summer, cheap ones, too. Comparatively few housewives are familiar with their use, which is unfortunate, as they are a fine addition to any menu.

Mulled Cucumbers. Pare cucumbers and cut them into strips. Drop the strips into boiling salted water to cover. Cook until they are barely tender—a short process, usually less than ten minutes. Drain. Serve with melted butter, paprika and a grating of fresh nutmeg. The cucumbers may be reheated in sour cream, or a little cream sauce flavored with lemon.

Sauteed Cucumbers. Prepare 3 cucumbers for cooking by the above method. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in skillet, add 2 tablespoons minced onion and saute until light brown. Add cucumber and 3 tablespoons of boiling water. Cook until water is absorbed. Combine ½ cup sour or sweet cream, 1 egg yolk, ½ teaspoon sugar, juice of ½ lemon if sweet cream is used, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon paprika. Remove cucumbers from heat and stir in this mixture. Stir and cook them over low heat until the sauce is slightly thickened. The cucumbers may be served on toast.

New Way With Prunes

Instead of cooking prunes in the usual way, place them in a jar containing pineapple, grapefruit or peach juice, or any combination of fruit juices, which may be saved from time to time when canned fruits are opened. Allow the prunes to stand until they have absorbed enough of the fruit juice to be swollen, at which time they are ready to be eaten. A really good breakfast dish that the family will enjoy.

Hand-Crocheted Gloves, Needed Summer Accessory

COPR. 1939, HOUSEHOLD ARTS, INC.

PATTERN 6345

By Alice Brooks.

TO BE TRULY smart you need hand-crocheted gloves to complete your summer wardrobe. Crochet these gloves in two identical pieces using fine yarn or mercerized cotton. Do them in white or a color and set them off with the dainty posy trim in two contrasting colors. Pattern 6345 contains instructions for making gloves in a small, medium and large size (all in one pattern; materials needed; illustrations of gloves and of stitches.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in coin to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 25C West Fourth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Shoe Wardrobe Turns Up Its Toes

The shoes in this wardrobe should take their wearer through most daytime occasions. The dressed up "pug" shoes (left above) are of patent leather and suitable to wear with town sheers.

Perhaps you don't remember when the turned-up toe was quite the thing. That was back in the slightly saucy 1900's, and now this perky turn of the century theme is influencing current shoe styles in a big way. So, no matter how much of a Tory you may be about your shoe styles, it would be a good idea to get acquainted with this modernized footwear. A famous shoe stylist created the wardrobe of shoes pictured above. Two of the models feature the turned up toes, which are called "pug" toes. They are gay, light hearted and perfect accompaniments for the persistent little girl dresses and other youthful fashions of summer. But to be safely conservative at the same time in your footgear, you should round out your summer shoe wardrobe with the classic opera pump so desirable for all-around wear

Your Figure, Madame!

How Easily You Lose Weight Depends On Muscle Tone; Flabby Persons Must Build Up Through Exercise

ASIDE FROM YOUR intangible fund of will power, progress with your figure program may depend on a number of other things. You can lose all the weight you need to lose—and that promise stands—but unless you are fully prepared for certain snags, you might be tempted to give up too soon. It should help you to know just what these snags are.

If you have always taken an active interest in sports, you have good muscle tone, your weight is compact, and you may have to fight off every pound. You will be doing pretty well to average a loss of one pound a week. But, on the other hand, you have a head start on a good figure, for compact weight always looks better, even when there is too much of it!

In comparison, the flabby overweights seem to have an unmeritedly easier time of it. When much of the excess is in flabby tissue, it can be rapidly lost. Reducers of this type take off as much as five pounds in one week and 10 pounds in 21 days without any heroic effort on their part.

Exercise Needed

When you can take the pounds off at a fairly brisk clip your spirits are buoyed up by the weight losses and dieting is easy. But if you are flabby, your work is all laid out for you! You will have to exercise to acquire some of that good muscle tone before you can have a really lovely figure.

Another factor, and one that's tied up with flabbiness, is the amount of the excess. The more excess weight you have, the more of it will be in flabby tissue. That's why the person who is 50 pounds overweight averages more pounds per week than the person who is only 10 pounds overweight.

Occasionally, we hear from some reducer who has dieted for two whole weeks without losing even one pound. Now, whether your weight is compact or flabby, you can expect to lose at least one pound a week. The reducers who stick closely to their diets don't usually have this trouble, but if you should be the exception, the explanation is water retention. Here is what happens: You do lose weight in the form of fatty tissue, but this weight is immediately replaced by the accumulation of water in the tissues. When this water balance adjusts itself, you may wake up some fine morning to find that you are at least five pounds lighter!

Cut Down on Salt

During this time, however, you can help matters along by cutting down on your salt intake. The amount of salt you eat seems to have a direct influence on the storage of water. And if you cannot limit yourself to the small amount of salt required in cooking, ask your druggist for a salt substitute.

The water you drink, by the way, has nothing whatever to do with water retention; you need at least eight glasses a day.

At all times in your program, exercise is essential. Don't let trouble with weight reduction cause you to lose interest in your exercise. You can go right along making improvements in your measurements whether or not you lose weight. Besides, it is a very important factor in your sense of well being.

Clear Speech Wins Audience

"—AND ELEANOR GRAY will be our national delegate," smiles the club president, announcing election results.

Easy to see why Eleanor is prominent in her club. She doesn't fumble or stammer in accepting office, but knows it's correct to begin with "Mr. President, fellow members——." Clearly she continues, "I deeply appreciate the confidence you've shown in me——"

Posts of honor come your way in clubs, church and civic groups, when you are sure of parliamentary procedure, can talk convincingly.

How it adds to your confidence—when you wish to make a motion—if you know it's correct to catch the chairman's eye by rising slightly, raising your hand. When he acknowledges you, rise to your full height and speak.

Even if you say only a few words you impress others favorably if you speak distinctly. Good practice to read aloud at home, learn to open your mouth when speaking. Tight lips, tight teeth prevent pure full tones.

And here are a few rules to keep you poised, to help you hold your audience when you make full-length speeches.

Keep your weight evenly balanced on the balls of your feet to avoid a slouchy, uneasy posture. Look directly at your audience — not over their heads. And speak in short sentences—vary your tone.

By following such simple rules you can speak anywhere — at clubs, in business—with ease and charm. Our new 40-page booklet, "Self-Instruction In Public Speaking," gives parliamentary rules, tells how to improve the voice, prepare and present convincing speeches. Has many sample speeches—such as introducing a speaker, presenting a gift, suggestions for toastmasters, radio.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Self-Instruction In Public Speaking," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Typist Who Couldn't Find Work Turns to Picking Dead Pansies

New York, May 29.

THIS IS THE flower season in Rockefeller Center. The space between the British and French buildings is lined with flower beds. And there the only professional pansy picker in New York pursues her art.

Moreover, she is a very pretty young lady whose name is Edna Finley, who comes all the way from the suburbs to pluck the dead pansies out of these enormous beds. This chore she performs every day from 9 to 5, getting off at noon on Saturdays to enjoy her personal life. Miss Finley, looking very fetching in a yellow smock and a fancy handkerchief on her head, relaxed over an orangeade and told me how she started her unusual career.

"When I got out of high school I registered with an employment agency and told them I wanted clerical work. Only a little while ago they telephoned from here and said they wanted a girl as pansy picker. It isn't clerical, exactly, but it is a pleasant job and probably I enjoy it more than working an adding machine."

Of course, Edna's job is a seasonal one, for not even Mr. Rockefeller's flowers bloom all year round. She will probably end up thumping away on the typewriter. She had her day in the sun, which will be very hot a little later on, and after all, it is something to have been the only pansy picker in the city of 7,000,000 people. It is something, but when you add it up it is not really very much.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: People who read newspapers very closely usually find interesting and amusing things. During the recent visit of the Nicaraguan presidential family, with the resulting firing of flash bulbs at them, I noticed one shot at West Point while the cadets passed in review. His Excellency and the academy superintendent, Gen. Benedict, had their eyes fixed on the future generals, but Senora Somoza was looking point-blank at the camera, just like a movie star. It was quite all right inasmuch as she is a very pretty woman and was beautifully dressed—but it was not strictly cricket from a newspaper point of view.

The Gentler Sex

Ultimatum to Bores

ON HER RETURN from the New York World's Fair yesterday, Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, founder and president of the Do Something About It League, announced a brand-new campaign—one to censor summer conversation.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"What did you think of the fair, Mrs. DeGoofey?" was the first question hurled at the famous reformer at her press conference.

"I shall certainly not tell you!" she exclaimed. "Too many people are already expressing their opinions along that line—and at length. In fact, my immediate reform project is a Society for the Suppression of World's Fair Comment.

"Now, I realize there is no way on earth to prevent people asking the question, 'What do you think of the fair?' It is the bromide of the hour. But the person who takes such a question literally belongs in the same school as the traditional bore who, when asked how he is, proceeds to tell you.

"Now, my motto in regard to World's Fair comment is, 'Say it with one adjective as 'swell' or 'rotten,' as the case may be, and let the whole matter drop there. I want no detailed, long-winded accounts of the perisphere, the tulips, the hot dogs or the marvels of science. Most of us have been suffocated by so many printed and spoken words about the fair that nothing anyone could tell us now would be news.

No Pollyannas On Hot Days

Now, as to the other phases of my conversation campaign. First, I want to say that I am NOT opposed to comment on the weather. I consider weather the most important and fascinating subject of all summer conversation, and I think people who grimly refrain from talking about it are insufferable prigs and bores. However, I have a few reforms to suggest along that line."

"Will you do anything about the person who explains that 'it's the humidity?'" asked a light editorial writer.

"No! Even I am baffled there. But I shall undoubtedly try to suppress the wag who goes around asking, 'Is it hot enough for you?' I shall also curtail returned vacationists from enumerating the numbering of blankets they slept under.

"Now, don't misunderstand me. I am not opposed to persons berating the weather. Nothing is so enraging as the smirking, hypercritical man or woman who says, 'Oh, I don't mind the heat,' or 'I don't let myself think about the heat.' In fact, I am going to start a movement to put all such persons into uniforms of fur coats and ear muffs through the month of August.

Sun Tan, Mileage Are Taboo

"Then I also hope to put a ban on men motorists' relating the mechanical or geographical details of their vacation motor trips. I expect to do something about the endless discussion of sun tan among women. Other subjects I hope to have tabooed are the way permanents behave in the heat, whether or not women are justified in leaving off their girdles, and how delightful it is out among the radishes and chiggers at the homes of suburbanites or down among the mosquitoes at cottages on the bay."

"When do you expect to start swatting in your new campaign, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a sports writer.

"Just as soon as I finish a short lecture tour I am making," was the reply.

"What will be your subject of interpretation?" asked a political columnist.

"It will be 'Henrietta DeGoofey at the World's Fair.'"

"But I thought you were opposed to the World's Fair comment, Mrs. DeGoofey."

"Ah, but this is different. You see, I shall discuss only my experiences on the Midway. And THAT was different!"

Creams Permit Sunning Without Deep Tanning

Take your choice about suntanning this summer. If you expect to wear the frills and frou frou of the little girl styles, a dark suntan is not for you. However, if you want to get the benefits of the sun rays and still keep your very fair complexion, cover your face, neck, arms and shoulders with a protective cream lotion. Pat the lotion on with your fingertips. Waterproof, the lotion affords constant protection as a make-up foundation.

If you want to regulate your tan there is a sunproof cream that permits a slight tan and wards off the severe rays that brown deeply. Greaseless and waterproof, it acts as a vanishing cream that keeps the make-up looking fresh.

Mrs. Roosevelt Exhibits Ensemble She'll Wear to Greet King, Queen

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

CAPITAL SOCIETY may be all a-dither about the forthcoming arrival of Great Britain's King and Queen—but Mrs. Roosevelt's not.

"I'm a calm person," she said yesterday at her press conference, after answering "No" when asked if she was getting excited about the royal visit.

However, she revealed that the ensemble she will wear to meet Their Majesties is ready and waiting; that plans are being completed for the program that will give the royal couple an idea of American music in all stages of development and that new springs and mattresses have been ordered for all double beds at the White House.

Furthermore, she has arranged that the King and Queen will have a chance to see the Nation's Capital and other localities not only by guide but by guidebook—WPA guidebooks at that. "Washington, City and Capital," the thick WPA tome published in 1937, will be placed in the royal suite, along with a guide book of Dutchess County, one of New York, and a couple of guide pamphlets of the White House and the Capitol.

Mrs. Roosevelt doubts Their Majesties will need to brush up on historical anecdotes related in any of the books. She has found Britons know almost as much about American history as Americans know themselves.

The moon will come "over the mountain" for the royal couple at the musicale following the state dinner on June 8, for Kate Smith, radio singer, is the latest headliner added to the program. Another artist to be featured is Alan Lomax, who will sing two cowboy numbers to his own guitar accompaniment. He is the son of John A. Lomax, widely known authority on cowboy ballads and other types of American folk songs.

Exhibits Dress for Noted Occasion

At the end of her press conference, Mrs. Roosevelt exhibited for the first time the dress she will wear to meet Their Majesties. Fashioned of azure lightweight wool, sent to her by British wool gowners, it was styled by Clare Potter, American designed and is made on simple lines with a aring skirt and a slight v-neckline, piped in white pique and trimmed with a flat pikue bowson the front. It will be worn with a dark blue straw hat and dark blue shoes.

Mrs. John Boettiger, daughter of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, probably will have a frock of the same material, the First Lady said. The gift, it seems, included enough cloth for two dresses.

New matresses and springs have been put on all double beds at the White House recently, not only because royal visitors and their entourage are expected, but because the Roosevelt sons and daughters complained that beds in the Executive Mansion were most uncomfortable.

Leaves for Lecture In Tennessee

Mrs. Roosevelt received members of the United Daughters of the Confederacy at tea yesterday afternoon and last evening left for Johnson City, Tenn., where she will deliver a lecture this evening.

She will return to Washington tomorrow morning and tomorrow night will entertain with the President at their annual dance for the Fourth. Estate. Thursday at 12:30 p. m. she will receive pupils from a school in San Antonio, Tex., and later that afternoon will entertain at tea wives of a number of delegates to the convention of the International Association of Automobile Clubs.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be off to New York Thursday evening and will present awards to the winners in the outdoor art exhibition in Greenwich Village on Friday. From New York City she will go to Hyde Park to spend a few days. She will return to Washington June 7 and on that same morning will hold her next press conference at 11 o'clock.

WEDDING MEMORIES: Although none of the formal accounts of the Grosjean-Davies marriage mentioned it, 3-year-old Suzanne Walker, niece of the bride, stole the show when her aunt, the former Emlen Knight Davies, became a bride on Saturday afternoon at Oakington, the estate of Senator and Mrs. Tydings.

Flower-Girl Makes Solo Entrance

The small flower girl declined at the last minute to be part of the wedding procession. She waited to make a solo entrance at the very minute the Rev. William B. Lusk began the ceremony. Looking very much like a blonde-haired doll in her floor-length pink frock and poke bonnet, she proceeded toward the couple at the altar.

"Where's a wedding?" she asked, her voice breaking through the solemn atmosphere of the nuptial scene.

From her matron-of-honor mother, Mrs. Aldace Walker, to her usher-father she ran. "What's the man saying?" she asked. "WHAT'S he saying?"

Stifled smiles broke out on the faces of all attendants. A titter ran through the throng witnessing the nuptial rites. Suzanne's queries, insistent and piping, continued until the ceremony was concluded; and then as she tripped away with her nurse, other junior attendants took over the spotlight.

Train-Bearers Step on Train

Two train-bearers, small Alice Conally Tydings and Lynn Howard, turning around to do their duty for the wedding recessional, stepped on the train instead of picking it up. But that slight mishap was soon corrected, and the wedding party—one of the loveliest of the season—moved back toward the house . . .

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: The Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, will be guest of honor at a dinner to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg on Friday . . . Contrary to reports that she will leave soon for an extended visit in France, Mrs. Mark Bristol plans to remain in Washington all summer, and will keep open her Massachusetts avenue home . . . Judge and Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister are planning a dinner for Thursday evening.

Golden Wedding Celebrated by Sutherlands

Daughter Gives Tea In Their Honor at Georgetown Home

In a shower of congratulatory telegrams and floral offerings, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sutherland celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Sunday afternoon when their daughter, Mrs. Sutherland Mayo, gave a large tea in their honor.

The party was held in the regency home of Mrs. Mayo in Georgetown—or rather in the garden, where most of the guests chose to congregate. As Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland entered the garden from the ballroom, Sidney and his orchestra, who were stationed in the shrubbery, broke into the wedding march. The couple danced about on the lawn for a few minutes, and from then on the orchestra concentrated on old-fashioned airs such as "Put on Your Old Gray Bonnet" and others of an earlier vintage.

Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland had ten children, of whom four are now living. Two of her daughters, Mrs. Wallace Dunkel and Mrs. Stanley Harris, were present, with their children. A son, Lieut. Col. Richard K. Sutherland, is in the Philippines, but sent a cable of congratulations.

A big wedding cake, with gold frosting, was set up in the garden, and two enormous vases filled with 50 yellow roses further carried out the golden wedding motiff. Among the guests were Judge and Mrs. Harry Covington, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, Col. Francis Harrington, Mrs. Benjamin Thaw and Mrs. Pearson Rust, both in black; Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McConihe, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios with their houseguest, Mrs. Rufus Peckham, of New York; Representative Hamilton Fish and Mrs. Wallach Merriam.

Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland came here 49 years ago, shortly after their marriage. The bridegroom studied at George Washington University for a while and then went to Elkins, W. Va., to make his home. From there he was elected to Congress, serving first as Representative and then as Senator.

Teacher Salaries Increased

Virginia Bureau Raises Standards For Accredited Colleges

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 29.—Dr. T. D. Eason, State director of higher education, made public today revised standards for accredited colleges in Virginia, including a provision raising the minimum salaries for full professors from $2,500 to $3,000 for a nine-month session.

The regulations recently approved by the State board of education supersedes standards adopted by the board in 1925.

In addition to the recommended $3,000 for full professors, the standards recommend at least $2,500 for associate professors, $2,000 for assistant professors, and $1,500 for full time instructors.

"The employment of instructors at low salaries should be discouraged," the regulations said.

At another point in the summary of the regulations, the board of education said "an institution can give evidence of sufficient income to comply with the minimum salary scale, to maintain the library and laboratories and such other facilities as are necessary to the attainment of its aims.

"Whether the main support of an institution is derived from endowment, denominational organizations, or student fees, is not so vital as is the evidence that adequate funds have been regularly received during a period of years and that there is reasonable assurance such support will be continued.

"An important item of financial support is the expenditure per student for instructional purposes (teaching staff, library, classroom, and laboratory supplies) in connection with which colleges should be prepared to appropriate at least $150 per student per session of nine months."

The State board said the new standards placed the emphasis "upon considerations of a qualitative rather than a quantitative nature." It said some of the specific standards were necessarily qualitative but were not to be used as devices for scoring an institution point by point "but as a means of assessing it as a well co-ordinated, developing institution of collegiate rank."

It added that institutions varied so widely with respect to control, financial support, aims and clientele "that it is neither desirable nor practicable to maintain a series of standards to which all institutions seeking the approval of the board should be required to adhere in every particular."

No college will be accredited until it has been visited and favorably reported upon by a representative of a State board of education. Recognition will not be granted on a promise that requirements will be met, the board said, but on evidence that they have been met, ordinarily for a period of two years.

With reference to faculties, the board said the effectiveness of the teaching staff "shall be judged chiefly by the expense to which it maintains among its own members and the students a high degree of scholarship and the proper concern for the amenities of life."

Dr. Eason said a committee from the Virginia Association of Colleges assisted the State board in drafting the revised standards. Members of that committee were: Dr. George O. Ferguson, jr., dean of arts and sciences, University of Virginia; Dr. H. G. Noffsinger, president of Virginia Intermont College; Dr. Theodore H. Jacks, president of Randolph-Macon Womans College; Dr. W. J. Gifford, dean of Madison College; Dr. David C. Wilson, of Hampden-Sydney College, and Dabney S. Lancaster, of Sweetbriar College.

Hagerstown Proposes Seamen For Bergdoll's Buried Gold

Hagerstown, May 29.—A pot of gold supposedly containing $200,000, which Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, draft dodger, told Army officers he buried in the mountains west of Hagerstown while he was hiding out with his brother, Irwin, at a local hotel during the World War, again may be sought, Sheriff Joseph D. Baker said today. It is said that United States Army authorities still are inclined to believe that Bergdoll's story of the buried pot of gold is true.

Attendants at the hotel, where the two brothers stayed under assumed names, recall that they often made excursions to the country while living here. It was the story that he had hidden the gold near Hagerstown that induced Army authorities to permit him to leave prison with two guards to hunt the treasure. It was while Bergdoll and the two guards stopped over at the Philadelphia residence of his mother that the draft dodger escaped, drove into Canada and from Halifax boarded a boat that took him to Germany. It was learned that his route in his flight from Philadelphia brought him to a point 6 miles west of Hagerstown, and at the time it was believed that he dug up the treasure and took it with him to Germany.

At one time several months after Bergdoll's escape and the story of the hidden treasure had resulted in a lively hunt, a small tin box containing several coins was found by a road worker near Brownsville. The story that the Bergdoll treasure had been found gained wide circulation, but an investigation disclosed that the coins found by the worker were of little value and had no connection with the supposed buried Bergdoll gold.

State Hopes To End Impasse On Road Funds

$6,000,000 Program Held Up Pending Dispute Settlemen

Richmond, Va., May 29.—Highway said after a telephone conversation with Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Federal Bureau of Public Roads, today no agreement has been reached on the question of rebuilding two bridges at Riverton.

However, the commissioner said the Federal official would be supplied with the State plans and that it was hoped the impasse that has tied up about $6,000,000 in Federal and State road funds soon would be ended.

Shirley pointed out that the State's plans for widening the Riverton bridges over the north and south forks of the Shenandoah River to 24 feet and making them of standard load capacity were nearly complete.

Last week the Virginia commissioner reported the United States authorities were withholding sanction of the expenditure of about $3,000,000 in Federal aid for Virginia highways pending State action on their request that new bridges be built at Riverton. Approximately the same amount of State matching funds also remain tied up as a result of the impasse.

Board Asked to Reconsider Action Ending Law Degrees

William and Mary Student Committee Protests Proposed Movement; 63 Now Are Taking Legal Course at College

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., May 29.—A student committee said it would ask today that the board of visitors of the College of William and Mary reconsider its decision to discontinue awarding law degrees after the 1939-1940 session.

The board of the first American institution to establish a chair of law (1779) voted in session Saturday to discontinue instruction in the more technical fields of law and to merge the School of Jurisprudence with the Marshall-Wythe School of Government and Citizenship.

The board proposed to continue the teaching of the broad fundamentals of jurisprudence and constitutional law but to stop awarding law degrees in view of the duplication of effort between the law schools of William and Mary and of the University of Virginia. Both are State supported.

Reconsideration of the board's action was called for at an impromptu student mass meeting at the college yesterday.

Some students took issue with the board's statement that the awarding of law degrees would be discontinued to avoid duplication of effort between the law schools of William and Mary and the University of Virginia.

"If the duplication argument is valid," they said, "then the college might as well abandon its school of education. Other State schools also specialize in the field of education."

There are 63 students in the law school, five of whom expect to receive degrees next month.

Dancing Features Night's Activities for Midshipmen

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, May 29.—Twice a thousand comely misses from every State in the Union unpacked new evening gowns tonight for three dances highlighting the fourth day of the Naval Academy June Week fete.

Midshipmen, spruce and gleaming in formal uniforms, only furnished background for the gay frocks in every shade of the spectrum. "Main events" on the night's program were the superintendent's garden party for graduating midshipment, the Second Class ring dance and the Third Class ball.

The historic ring dance saw dedication of the academy seal rings given each member of the Second (Junior) Class. By custom, each ring is dipped in a font mingling waters from the seven seas.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Wilson Brown entertained the graduating class and their families at a party in their bloom-filled garden. Later there was a dance for the First Class in nearby Dahlgren Hall.

The Third Class ball was held in MacDonough Hall. Only the Plebes had no formal affair scheduled. The plebes may not attend any functions until the June ball the night before graduation.

The program tomorrow will give the 15,000 Naval Academy visitors a "breather" after four hectic days of formal events. Chief feature of the day is presentation of the colors at 5 p. m., one of the most colorful ceremonies of June Week.

Miss Frances Norfleet Moses, of Little Rock, Ark., named as color girl of the regiment by Midshipman Benjamin Jarvis, of Ferda, Ark., will present the national colors and the Naval Academy flag to the first company of midshipmen, which Jarvis commands.

The first company won the right to receive the colors by taking the intercompany drill competition.

Dr. Wright, one-time resident physician at the institution and warden from April, 1934, to October, 1935, was the unanimous choice of the board of welfare, Board Chairman Willis Jones announced after a meeting.

Quenstedt was dismissed early in February "for the good of the service." Since then, Deputy Warden William F. Steiner has been acting head of the Jessups Prison.

Jones said the board had "carefully considered" the qualifications of a great many" applicants for the job and a number of persons who were not applicants.

"In the selection of Dr. Wright, the board has been actuated by a desire to provide the best possible management for this institution," he continued.

"Dr. Wright entertains, as do the members of this board, the view that the day has passed when penal institutions may be regarded merely as places of detention for persons convicted of crime."

Suspect Surrenders In Slaying

Virginian Sought For Killing of Constable; Fear Of Lynching Ebbs

By the Associated Press.

Chatham, Va., May 29.—Sam Swanson, colored, sought by a posse since the killing of Constable William N. Coward near Callands yesterday, surrendered today at the home of his father. He was brought to the jail here.

Sheriff Archer Overbey quoted the man as saying, "I reckon I just got mad." Officers said he was persuaded to surrender by his father, Walter Swanson.

Commonwealth's Attorney Whitehead, of Pittsylvania County, was uncertain today whether he would ask Judge Turner Clement to call a special Circuit Court grand jury to consider the case. Sam Swanson has been charged in a warrant for the killing which occurred as the constable sought to arrest a man on a drunk and disorderly charge at a church gathering.

Swanson, his hands in the air and calling out that he was giving himself up, emerged with his father from a barn on the elder Swanson's place. Sheriff Overbey arrested him and placed handcuffs on his wrists in the presence of several State troopers.

State Officer T. F. Webb said Constable Coward was taking his prisoner to an automobile yesterday when several other colored men approached. There was a brief scuffle, the trooper said, and one of the men grabbed the officer's gun and shot him five times. Webb said Swanson fled from the scene.

Officers said two men, Paul Fuller and Andrew Campbell, were being held pending an investigation in the shooting. Davis Holly was named in a warrant as the man the constable was attempting to arrest just before the shooting occurred.

Feeling ran high after reports of the slaying spread and officers spent anxious moments explaining to a posse of farmers that a man detained for questioning last night was not wanted for the shooting. Today, however the intense feeling apparently had subsided and officers were not apprehensive.

Infantile Paralysis Warning Is Issued

Richmond, Va., May 29 (AP).—Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, said today that while there was no evidence at present of the spread of poliomyelitis from South Carolina to adjoining States, it had been deemed advisable to require observation and supervision for two weeks' period of all persons coming to Virginia from areas in South Carolina where the disease is "unduly prevalent."

In letters to local health directors and secretaries of boards of health he suggested that all persons coming from affected areas refrain from contacting children and from attending schools, churches, public meetings or other places of public gatherings until two weeks had elapsed.

Henry Picard Wins Metropolitan Open Title

Shoots a 69 To Beat Out Paul Runyan

Winner Gets Away To Early Lead to Capture Tournament In 18-Hole Play-Off

By the Associated Press.

White Plains, N. Y., May 29.—The Metropolitan Open golf marathon was ended today, with the crown adorning the unruly brown locks of Henry Picard. The tall Hershey, Pa., stylist carded a two-under-par 69 to edge out Paul Runyan, the home club pro, by two strokes in the second 18-hole playoff.

Picard, Runyan and Vic Ghezzi had tied at the end of the regulation 72 holes Saturday with scores of 283. In the first playoff yesterday Ghezzi dropped out with a 77 as Runyan and Picard remained in a deadlock with 70 strokes each.

Picard lost little time today in showing that he didn't intend to make this tournament a perpetual motion affair. Stealing Runyan's own thunder, i. e., approaching with deadly accuracy and dropping putts from everywhere, he jumped into a two-stroke lead on the first two holes, made the turn still two holes to the good by virtue of a three-under-par 32 to Runyan's 34, and came home virtually under wraps.

Runyan was playing fine golf, and it takes fine golf to par the Metropolis course, but only once did fortune smile on a long putt, and then it was too late to matter much.

On the first hole Picard was on with a drive and a seven iron for a cinch birdie four as Runyan took a five. On the second the Hershey sharpshooter dropped a 12-footer for another birdie, and after that it was just a case of futile pursuit on the part of Runyan, who picked up his first birdie on the ninth and his only other sub-par score on the fifteenth when a 25-foot putt, the kind he had been missing by inches, finally dropped.

Picard was in trouble only once on the out nine, pushing his second into the rough on the 419-yard fifth and leaving him a blind shot over rough to the green. He landed in a trap and took a bogy five.

Two or three times he flirted with trouble on the home nine, but only on the short sixteenth did it get him down. His tee shot missed the green and he chipped 10 feet past the cup and missed coming back. He also bogied the eighteenth, but it was mere carelessness. With the tournament in the bag, he three-putted.

Burning Tree Pro First Off Tee in Open

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The first ball off the tee in the forty-third National Open championship, June 8, at the Philadelphia Country Club, Spring Mill course, will be fired by Frank Cunningham, the red-haired mentor from Burning Tree. Pairings released yesterday by the United States Golf Association listed Cunningham for 8:15 a. m., with Stockton Rogers, Ponte Vedra Beach amateur, as a partner.

The other four District representatives in the field of 171 after the crown held by Ralph Guldahl drew average pairings for the first two rounds on Thursday and Friday. Pairings will be revised for the final day's play, June 10, when the low 60 and ties will battle it out for the coveted championship.

Wiffy Cox, Congressional professional, is seventh from last on the first day's list, playing with the unorthodox but long-hitting Felix Serafin, of Clarks Summit, Pa., at 2:50.

Walper Draws Thompson

Leo Walper, East-West highway driving range pro, who will leave for the Open this week for practice rounds, drew Jack Thompson, the Youngstown, Ohio, pro, as a partner, at 9:20, while ten minutes later Al Houghton, Georgetown Prep pro, will leave the tee with Al Espinosa, of the famed Espinosa brothers. Sandwiched in between Walper and Houghton is the prominent twosome of Craig Wood and Henry Picard.

Bobby Brownell, lone District amateur in the field, from the Manor Club and Duke University, will play with Eddie Williams, well-known pro from Bryn Mawr C. C., Morton Grove, Ill., at 1:25.

Yankees Take Series Opener From Red Sox

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 29.—Proving that they are as apt defensively as offensively, the Yankees increased their lead in the American League today to 6½ games, downing the Boston Red Sox, 6-1, in the first game of their series.

The Sox, second-place American League club, threatened on several occasions, but the Yankee infield, tired of being boosted for its hitting prowess alone, came up with four smartly executed double plays to cut off potential runs.

Bump Hadley started for the Yanks and though he was relieved after staying seven innings, he was credited with his fourth straight victory.

He allowed three hits, but was wild, walking eight and yielding the lone Boston run in the second inning.

150,000 Fans Due to Watch 500-Mile Race

No Favorite Listed As 33 Drivers Await Start This Morning

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, May 29.—Indianapolis' annual battle of speed—a daring test of men and motors that brings upward of $35,000 to the winner and a new crop of hard-luck stories from 32 other drivers—will be fought tomorrow before a crowd that may reach 150,000.

At 10 a. m. (C. S. T.) a bomb, bursting high in the air, will send 33 of America's greatest race drivers into the twenty-seventh annual 500-mile classic at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Along about 2:30 p. m. a checkered flag, symbol of victory and the gold that goes with it, will wave in the face of one of those drivers.

The winner? There's no outstanding favorite.

If it should be Floyd Roberts, husky, mild-mannered Van Nuys, Calif., airplane factory worker, he would be the first man to win two Indianapolis races in a row. He won last year with a new 500-mile record of 117.2 miles an hour.

If Louis Meyer, of Huntington Park, Calif., should catch the checkered flag, he would become the only four-time winner. His three previous triumphs already stand as a record.

But there are 31 other drivers to be reckoned with—from Jimmy Snyder, of Chicago, who won the pole starting position with the fastest qualifying speed, 130.138 miles an hour, down to Billy Devore, of St. John, Kans., the slowest qualifier at 116.527. The average speed of the 33 drivers over the 10-mile qualifying route was

Nats Bow to A's, 5-4; Wasdell Is Benched

First Sacker's Two Errors in Ninth Cost Kelley Game

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

The Nats yesterday broke a losing streak—the Athletics'.

Their own losing streak of five straight is still very much intact, thanks to First Baseman James Wasdell, who took matters into his own hands in the ninth inning, as the saying goes, made a mess of 'em. With full co-operation from Wasdell, the A's moved the winning run of a 5-4 ball game across the plate. It was their first victory in their last six starts.

The Nats were doing rather nicely—for the Nats—up until that ninth inning. They were in a 4-4 deadlock and sort of threatening to win the game. And then Wasdell went back to his first base position and began to play it as if he were in the hire of the A's.

He left his base to field a drag bunt off Joe Gantenbein's bat as his first gesture and for no reason at all tried a bush-league stunt of flipping the ball backhanded to Harry Keiley, who was covering the bag. His heave cleared Kelley's head by six feet and Gantenbein raced to second on the error.

With none as yet out, Wasdell stepped back into the picture to the dismay of the Nats, by muffing a pop fly off Dee Miles' bat that your Aunt Kate could have caught in her knitting basket. It was his second error of the inning. A bit later, Miles grounded out, and moved Gantenbein to third base.

Whereupon, with the Nat's outfielders playing in close in an attempt to prevent Gantenbeing from scoring on a fly ball, Wayne Am-

Sammy West to Play First Base Today In Double-Header

Sammy West, an outfielder throughout his 12-year career in the big leagues, will be at first base for the Nats today in the Decoration Day twin bill with the Athletics.

Manager Bucky Harris made that announcement last night shortly after the debacle of Jimmy Wasdell in the ninth inning yesterday when his two errors paved the way for the Athletics to score the winning run.

Admitting that Wasdell had proved a great disappointment, Harris declared:

"He has been playing as if he needs a rest. He hasn't been much help to the club, and so I'm making a change. I don't know how long it will last, but until further notice, Sammy West is our first baseman."

West has not played more than a half dozen games at first base during his 12 years in the majors, but since the start of the season he has been preparing himself for the emergency that apparently has arrived. He has been playing the bag in infield practice nearly every day.

"I believe Sammy will give us good enough protection out there," said Harris, "and lately he has started to hit the ball hard. I've got to make some kind of a change and this appears to be the best one in sight."

Washington club officials refused to admit that they are angling for another first baseman, but reliable reports are that Clark Griffith is frantically attempting to swing a deal. Failing to acquire a first baseman from a big league club, Griffith may dip into the high minors for a replacement.

Alex Alexandra, the only Washington pitcher to win a start in the club's last five games, will go

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

What is laughingly referred to as the American League pennant race has ceased to be a race with only one-fifth of the season having run its course. The Yankees are making motions not only to clinch the pennant by July 4, but to lap the field by that date.

POVICH

They've won 18 out of their last 19 games, if you want the horrible details. They're leading the second-place Boston Red Sox by 6½ games with only six weeks of the season having been played. The third-place White Sox are nine games out of the lead. Up at Fenway Park yesterday there was no encouragement for the league as a whole. The Red Sox, the one team conceded a chance to check the Yankees' mad stampede, were slapped down by the Yanks, 6 to 1, in the opener of what is supposed to be a crucial series.

The Red Sox are a pretty good ball club—in Fenway Park. They have the sort of a right-handed hitting line-up that makes capital of a short leftfield fence. Thus they differ from the Yankees, who are a swell ball club in any sort of park. The Yanks have what the Red Sox lack, a balanced line-up of left and right-handed hitters.

They are the sort of a club for which a fellow like Irving Hadley can pitch winning ball, as he did yesterday. Hadley was batting around the league for a half-dozen years before he was finally traded to the Yankees by the Nats. But with the Yankees, he can pitch in the knowledge that they'll get plenty of runs for him. He's under little pressure, and that's a huge help to a pitcher.

Break Up the League

The other clubs around the league have little excuse for their own sad plight. The remedy may not be breaking up the Yankees. Perhaps it would be better to break up the rest of the league and gather together some clubs with gumption enough to battle it out with the Yanks in the same manner that they battle with clubs lower in the standings.

Cleveland played a two-game series with the Yankees last week. Did Manager Oscar Vitt send his ace, Bob Feller, against the Yanks? He did not. The Tigers played a two-game series with the Yankees a few days ago. Did Manager Del Baker send either Buck Newsom or Tommy Bridges against the New Yorkers? He did not. He saved 'em to pitch against other clubs.

There is evidence that the other clubs are virtually conceding the Yanks the pennant. Up at Boston, where Joe Cronin yesterday entered a crucial series against McCarthy's club, did he save Lefty Grove for that series? No, indeedy. He pitched Grove against the Nats, and left himself without his best bet to throw at the club he must beat for the pennant. George Caster is the only winning pitcher on the A's. But in the four-game series they just completed against the Yankees, Caster didn't make an appearance. Mack saved him for softer opposition.

Cronin 'Saves' Lefty Grove

Cronin's strategy against the Yankees is certainly open to criticism. The only pitcher who loomed as any sort of a safe risk against the Yankees, the team Cronin must beat, is Grove. Yet Cronin wasted Grove against the Nats. If managers in the league persist in withholding their pets against the Yankees as they have been doing, the race will be even more of a farce.

It isn't correct to presume, of course that any sort of pitching can beat the Yanks, but it might. At least, it would provide some flavor of competition. The Yanks certainly can't be licked by the sort of pitchers they've been facing. There are, you know, better ball players sitting on the Yankees' bench than those who are holding down regular jobs on other clubs.

Clark Griffith professes to see some hope for the rest of the league in the fact that the Yankees have stepped out to their long early-season lead. "They have been a good ball club in the past because they were able to come with a rush after getting off slowly," says Griffith. "This might be the year when they are starting fast and will fold at the finish."

Opposition Doesn't Matter

But that possibility apparently isn't troubling Manager Joe McCarthy, who is driving his lads into as huge a lead as they can get. If they keep up their present pace for another month, they can fold up horribly and still win the pennant.

Apparently it doesn't make much difference to the Yankees who they are playing. When they moved into Boston yesterday for the start of the supposedly crucial series with the Red Sox, they were meeting up with a red-hot club. The Sox had just won four straight from the Nats, were murdering the ball, were making all sorts of double plays and could do no wrong. But the Yankees moved in, held 'em to three hits and hammered out a 6-1 victory. Against the Yanks, the Sox cooled off. The Yanks simply put the chill on the rest of the league.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 29.—What the All-Star game is to baseball and the college All-Star games are to football, the Goodall Round Robin Tournament is to golf. The 1939 edition of it will open Thursday at the Fresh Meadow Club, with the 15 best golfers in captivity in the running. There is $5,000 on the line and it's the only tournament in sport where the last guy makes money.

The way the tournament is constructed makes it a truer test of golfing ability than the open, or any other match play tournament. It is an invitation affair. Each man plays seven full rounds of match play. Every putt must be holed, every match must be completed.

CONSIDINE

The players go out in three's, shifting opponents every match until each man has played at one time or another against the other 14. The system of scoring is complicated looking, but boiled down it is this: A man's losing holes are subtracted from his winning ones and the main purse goes to the bloke who best avoids losses. Sam Snead won it last year by winning 14 holes on the last day's play. He had been last in the standings after the first day, but his great finish put him in a tie with Gene Sarazen, one of the great match players of all time. And Sam beat Gene in a short play-off that went only two holes.

If Ralph Guldahl, Sam Snead and Paul Runyan are playing, and Guldahl beats Runyan 3-up, but loses to Enead, 4-up, Ralph's score for the day is minus one.

Matches Never Stop

Matches never stop, even when a player, for instance, is five up on his two opponents at the fourteenth hole. There is no chance, of course, that the losing man can win that particular match, but at least he might shave the other fellow's lead down to 1-70. Each player plays 126 holes, seven rounds, and every shot he makes during that time affects not only himself but every other player in the meet.

Backer of the tournament is Elmer Ward, a former caddy and one-time amateur star, who is now president of the company that breeds Palm Beach suits. There is not much chance that he'll ever be able to make the thing pay for itself, for in addition to giving purses to all 15 men who compete, he picks up all their expenses and the expenses of their omnipresent wives. It is the only free ride in golf, which is about the only sport which makes its players pay their ways.

In the Round Robin will be Ralph Guldahl, Sam Snead, Paul Runyan, Jimmy Thomson, Johnny Revolta, Ben Hogan, Dick Metz, Walter Hagen, Jimmy Hines, Denny Shute, Craig Wood, Harry Cooper, Olin Dutra and Horton Smith. No amateur is good enough to make it. One other pro will be added. Henry Picard dropped out, for fear of going stale before the impending National Open. Lawson Little wouldn't enter because his name wasn't on the original invitation list. Sarazen's dogs, after 20 years of hot golf, are beginning to bark out loud. Besides, Gene had a bad shock in last year's Round Robin. He had the thing won on the 126th green—or last hole—when miraculously Harry Cooper holed out from a sand trap to win the hole from him and put Gene in a tie with the onrushing Snead.

Gene Wins Toss

They started their play-off immediately—the brisk, tough old veteran and the quiet-spoken young hillbilly who was a barefoot caddy when Sarazen won his first open title.

"Listen, kid," Gene said, out of the tough corner of his mouth. "You'll have to hustle along here. I've got to catch a train East."

"Yes, sir," Snead said.

They tossed a coin, for the honor. Gene won, as if it were his right, and he stepped up and belted a nice one down the middle of the Cincinnati course where the thing was played. Snead stepped up apologetically and hit one 70 yards past Gene's good belt.

They both had 4's on the first hole. They had good drives on the second. And Gene, full of the wisdom of the game, sniffed the air and hit his second. Then he smartly delayed Snead's second shot. He had sensed a change in the wind, and he wanted it to work against Snead. But the solemn mountaineer was unaware of this. He came up to his ball and hit it like a bullet through the twisting wind, so long and hard and true that the pill rolled to within inches of the bucket.

Sarazen was through then. He bit his lip in pardonable frustration, for perhaps his last chance to win a great tournament was gone, and he swore:

Glenn Cunningham to Race Here Today in A. A. U. Meet

8 College Stars Face Kansas Ace

Washington-Lee High Favored in School Division in D. C. Meet at College Park

Headed by Glenn Cunningham, the peerless Kansas Flyer who will be making his first appearance here, one of the strongest fields ever assembled locally will bid for District A. A. U. and Metropolitan championships at College Park this afternoon.

The annual games, postponed by rain two weeks ago, will begin at 2 o'clock, weather permitting. In event of more rain the meet probably will be canceled.

Cunningham, the robot-like runner who holds all records for the mile, will compete against eight collegians in a special race. Mason Chronister, Maryland's lanky star, and John Corbett, from Catholic University, are expected to offer the opposition, if any, to Cunningham.

The other six who will pit their speed and stamina against the man whose perseverance and courage transformed him from a hopelessly crippled youngster into one of our finest athletes are A. Cranston, John Doyle and A. Martini, of C. U.; R. Sullivan and Tommy Field, of Maryland, and Bob Little, from American University.

Not the least interesting of these will be the battle for high school honors between the powerful Washington-Lee squad, winner of the recent University of Maryland and "C" Club meets, and Eastern, Tech and Central, all of which are represented by formidable teams.

This meet will mark the final scholastic appearance of Wally Legg, W.-L. dash, hurdle and field star, who is considered perhaps the greatest cinderman ever developed at the Ballston institution. In the University of Maryland field day meet Legg walked away with individual high scoring honors with firsts in the high and low hurdles and the 100 and a third in the broad jump.

The A. A. U. team race is expected to be a dog-fight between Catholic University and Maryland, with the Terps appearing a bit stronger, especially in the running events. Both are undefeated in dual competition this season, C. U. having climaxed its first clean slate in history by scoring a surprisingly decisive victory over LaSalle College.

On Fishing

Marshall Morgan fishes on the solunar tables whenever it is possible but on Sunday fishing through one period after another was produc- about nothing. Late in the afternoon, with barometer falling and line squalls coming down one after another, Capt. Taft Tippett put them over the deep hole just above the northwest buoy of the Middles. In less than an hour they had 145 big hardheads and were on their way home.

ACKERMAN

Catches on the Middle grounds have been running fair all this month, the largest well over the 200 mark—all hardheads, the few seatrout taken, small and hardly worth counting.

The first channel bas were taken on the beach below Ocean City on Saturday, and fishing should be good this week if the run continues. The usual run of small fish also are being taken.

Capt. Jim Whaley at Ocean City notes the catch of three blues trolling, which might be taken to mean that the schools are on their way in and might possibly supply a few weeks of fun before the white marlin get going late this month.

Larry Richey is fishing this week in the Rangeley region of Maine with former President Herbert Hoover as guests of Gov. Lewis O. Barrows. Reports have had thetrout running from 2 to 6 pounds, and plentiful, ever since the ice has been out of Kennebago Lake and Kennebago Stream.

This entire region is restricted to fly fishing, and the salmon are just as plentiful as the trout, of which the boast is made—it is one of few places in the country where they will rise to the fly every day during the season.

A note from Frank Bentz, chief clerk of the Maryland Conservation Commission, notes the stocking in two streams last week of legal sized trout. Beaver Creek received 570, while Severn Run got an even 500.

Frederick County streams were notable for the absence of anglers on them over the week-end. Mark Henley and Bill Briggs, of Eastern Air Lines, took four nice ones from Fishing Creek on Sunday. We think the creel should have been better, and probably would have been if they hadn't spent so much time at Cottie Willard's eating froglegs.

Kip Farrington and Mrs. Farrington have been fishing for several weeks along the cold Humboldt Current of the Chilean coas for the elusibe broadbill swordfish, which in that section reaches greater size htan any other place in America that we know about.

One report after another has come through, not only of large broadbills landed, but several large marlin as well, but none of them approached the world record fish until Saturday, when Mrs. Farrington broke the woman's world record with a 884-pounder which took 340 minutes to land.

Belgium, Yugoslavia Also Advance With England in Bracket

The semifinal brackets in the European zone of the Davis Cup competition were filled yesterday when Belgium, Yugoslavia and Germany came through to join England, which entered the round of four last Saturday.

In the upper half of the draw, Belgium completed its sweep of all five matches to qualify to meet Yugoslavia, which sent Italy to the sidelines by a 3-to-2 count. Germany eliminated Sweden in the lower half and will meet England for the right to enter the final round.

Roderich Menzel scored Germany's deciding point with a 2—6, 6—3, 6—3, 6—3 decision over Sweden's Karle Schroeder. The Yugoslavia-Italy series was decided by Ferenc Puncec's 13—11, 6—1, 6—8, 6—3 victory over Vannie Canepele after their match had been postponed from Sunday because of darkness.

Rockville Plays

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

Our famous official political handicapper here today gave us his early summer future book line, or figures, on the Republican nomination for President in 1940 and we noticed that he had John D. Rockefeller third choice at 8 to 1 to Tom Dewey and Senator Vandenberg, whom he rates equal favorites at 5 to 1.

RUNYON

It was the first time the name of Rockefeller had appeared on our handicapper's list, and when we expressed surprise at this inclusion as well as at the short price quoted, he said we might be even more surprised later on. He said quite a number of Republicans around Washington had been talking about Rockefeller as Presidential material, and why not?

"Rockefeller is undoubtedly America's private citizen No. 1," our official handicapper said. "He is perhaps the ablest businessman in the world, taking him off past performances, and a lot of Republicans think a great businessman might make a good President. He is a typical American of high moral character and principles who has done more for humanity than any man alive.

"His record, dovetailing with that of his father before him, is something astounding. He has given away more money than any man since the world began. He has spent more money on public health than any man that ever lived. He has given more money to the churches, and spent more money on public education than any other man in history.

"As an individual he has done almost as much in some fields as the entire Government of the United States itself, notably in housing and restoration and resettlement with the difference that Rockefeller has made most of his philanthropies pay—not back to himself but back to the philanthropies."

Has More to Spend

We said yes, it was undoubtedly true that Rockefeller has spent and given away more money than any man in history but that he had had more money to spend and give away than anyone else.

"Quite true," said our official handicapper, "but look at the thousands of other men who had enough money to do some spending and giving away without inconveniencing themselves, yet who never gave away a dime in the interests of their fellow man."

We asked him if he thought John D. Rockefeller has any idea of being a candidate for the Presidency and he said no, the idea had probably never even occurred to him and that Rockefeller would be unlikely to lift a finger to get the nomination.

"But," our official handicapper said, "suppose it was offered to him? Suppose the Republicans decided that he was the one man who could lead them to victory and handed him the nomination on a silver platter, so to speak. That could happen. Would any American refuse a chance to be President?"

We admitted that this was one we could not answer. We said we supposed it sometimes depended largely on prospects. We could remember a couple of fellows who refused nominations for the Presidency, but their refusals scarcely came under the head of refusing a chance to be President. They just knew the nomination meant no chance.

We said we had heard politicians say that great wealth was generally something of a barrier to a man's aspirations to the Presidency and our political handicapper laughed. He said that was old time stuff. He said we had not only had a number of quite rich Presidents but that the whole world is aware from the way Rockefeller has been giving his money away that he considers his wealth only as a trust with which to ameliorate the condition of mankind.

Amazing Experience

"He would have few, if any, weaknesses as a candidate," our official handicapper said. "Think of his amazing experience in handling problems pertaining to business and the public weal. He operates the largest fleet of merchant marine ships in the world. He is familiar with foreign business and social questions. For a quiet, home-loving, religious man, he is in many respects the most unique and spectacular individual on the face of the globe."

Our official handicapper was commencing to sound like a nominating speechmaker—one of those lyrical "a-man-who" fellows. We half expected him to wind up saying "Gentlemen, I give you John D. Rockefeller," then we remembered that he is a Democrat at heart and gave him credit for reporting on Rockefeller as above in the interests of veracity in this column.

You cannot discount our official handicapper, because he gave us Alf Landon as favorite for the Republican nomination at 5 to 1 this far off the last convention. Here is the way he rates the Republican field, the figures being the odds against each possibility, and if it is what the bookies call a "Dutch book," meaning one that is off balance on the percentages and could not win, just blame the handicapper.

Vandenberg, Michigan, 5 to 1.
Rockefeller, New York, 8 to 1.
Bricker, Ohio, 10 to 1.
Taft, Ohio, 15 to 1.
Joe Martin, Massachusetts, 25 to 1.
Borah, Idaho, 30 to 1.
Lodge, Mass., 50 to 1.
Saltonstall, Mass., 50 to 1.
LaGuardia, New York, 30 to 1.
James, Pennsylvania, 20 to 1.
Barton, New York, 20 to 1.
Vanderbilt, Rhode Island, 30 to 1.

22 Speedboats In Free-for-All Trophy Event

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 29.—Twenty-two speedboat pilots tuned up their motors here today in preparation for tomorrow's free-for-all race around Absecon Island for a year's possession of the giant Auerbach Memorial trophy.

The 22.6-mile course is considered one of the most dangerous in the country. Starting at 1 p. m. (E. S. T.) the racers will fight their way through 8 miles of open sea before turning at the jetty in Longport and starting a hazardous run through canals on the other side of the island.

George J. Skidd, of South Norwalk, Conn., will drive his Hel-Skef.

The Auerbach trophy, a $5,000 silver cup believed to be the largest in the world, was donated by S. Emil Auerbach, himself a noted boat-racer.

Manager Named

Central High Plays Eastern Tomorrow

Interhigh Baseball ChampionshipScheduled For Griffith Stadium

By Bill Burnett.

The flip of a coin at a meeting of coaches and officials yesterday may have given Central High the all-important "break" it needed in the interhigh championship baseball game tomorrow at Griffith Stadium. "Heads" it was, and Central had the privilege of being the visiting team in the crucial clash with Eastern's defending champions.

Inasmuch as the visiting team bats first, while the home club goes on the defensive more or less cold, the result may weigh heavily in the Mount Pleasanters' favor. In few of the series games have the visitors failed to score in the first session.

There is always the end of the game to think of, however, and Eastern might well profit by having the last "raps."

Coin-flipping wasn't the only occupation of the high school heads yesterday. All arrangements were ironed out between Coaches Jack Ray and Chief Guyon; Birch Bayh, head of public school health, and Mr. Bosley, chairman of the baseball committee.

Halt for Rain

First and foremost decision reached was that in event of rain the game would be put off until the first clear day and played then at Tech Stadium. Coaches realized the desire of their boys to play sandlot ball and wanted the game out of the way as soon as possible.

Because they were the home team, Eastern players took the first-base dugout and Eastern rooters the first-base stands. Central was allotted third-base dugout and stands. The game will start at 3:30 sharp, with C. J. Desper calling 'em behind the plate and Purdy on the bases. Student coupons will be honored at the turnstiles, and outsiders will be admitted for 25 cents.

Rozzelle Starts

Though Ray could not say definitely, it was a near certainty that he would start Central's one really effective hurler, Dicky Rozzelle. Chief Guyon was expected to counter with his stocky speedballer, "Puddin" Lovett.

The latter would be no stone around the neck of any team, whether his slants were clipping the plate or not. His batting average of .545 tops the list of 19 regulars hitting .300 or better in the unofficial compilation of record.

The only thing discounting Lovett's remarkable record is that he was at the plate only 11 times, due more than anything else to the fact that East League clubs played but four games compared to the six undertaken in the West section.

Benny Steiner and Jim Robertson, of Central and Roosevelt, respectively, were tied for second honors, each with .391. BMoth had nine safeties in 23 times, though Robertson failed to hit for a single extra base and Steiner had one double, one triple and a homer.

Capital May Get Pro FootballHeadquarters

Carl Storck, New League President, Reveals Plans for Bringing Offices To Washington From Dayton, Ohio

Headquarters of the National Professional Football League may be moved to Washington from Dayton, Ohio, before the next football season Carl Storck, new president and secretary of the league said here yesterday.

Storck, who became president of the National League following the death of Joe Carr, May 20, in Columbus, asserted Washington is the "logical place" for the league's headquarters.

"I intend to place this proposal before the meeting of team owners in Pittsburgh in July," he said, "It's this summer."

Removal of the League headquarters to Washington would give pro football added prestige, Storck added.

"Anything that comes out of Washington immediately catches the eye—it's like the 'man bits dog' story, it's news. And by setting up offices in the Capital the game's problems of social security, taxes and other matters would be much more simplified."

With the mercury hovering arounr 90 degrees outside, Storck sat in the office of George Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins, and voiced wistful predictions about brisk fall days and what they will bring to the Capital in the way of football.

The Sole Power

Vice president and treasurer of the National Football League since its inception in 1921, Storck is now the league's sole officer. In addition to acting as president and secretary, he will continue his old duties until April, 1940.

"Prospects for profesional football are unlimited," Storck said. "What is needed, however, is not more games, but bigger and finer ones. The colleges have the color now, but interest is shifting to professional football, and the league teams are going in for more color than ever next season.

Swing Band

Marshall broke in excitedly at this point to say the Redskins will have an 18-piece swing band, two brass bands, a 50-piece accordion playing aggregation and a 24-piece drum and bugle corps to add zest to the 1939 season games.

Storck, who has set up temporary league headquarters in Dayton, his home town, was in Washington to attend ceremonies preceding his daughter's graduation Thursday from National Park College in Forest Glen, Md., and to discuss feasibility of bringing the league headquarters here in the near future.

One of the Founders

Storck, along with Bud Talbot, one of Yale's greatest football players, and the late Joe Carr, founded the league in 1921. He had previously played football with the Dayton Triangles, at the Chicago "Y" College and at the University of Chicago, where he played one year under one of football's immortals, Alonzo A. Stagg.

"I played halfback then," Storck said. "But after one year, playing football, keeping up with studies and working my way through school proved too much, so I had to give football up."

The new National League president predicted that professional football attendance will double in the next ten years, while Marshall pointed out an increase of 88 per cent has been shown in attendance at professional games from 1934 through 1938. Attendance in 1938 increased 14 per cent over that for 1937, he added.

Max Baer Pitiful in Last Workout

Ex-Champ 'Coasts And Clowns' but Is Slow and Off Timing

By the United Press.

Grossinger Lake, N. Y., May 29. Maxie Baer, completing training for his contenders' battle with young Lou Nova Thursday night, looked pitiful today in three rounds of boxing that virtually wound up seven weeks of training.

Although Maxie was coasting and clowning most of the time against sparmates, Elza Thompson and Sandy McDonald, he appeared slow in his reactions, off in his timing and still wide open for straight lefts and rights.

This was somewhat unexpected and tragic, despite Maxie's 30 years, because he is concluding the first serious grind of training he ever put in for any fight in his 12-year career. And it is hard to imagine Baer's body, the most perfectly proportioned fighting machine the ring ever knew, not responding at last to rigorous conditioning and clean living.

Maxie looked so bad today that even his pal, Barney Ross, former lightweight and welterweight champion, admitted, "he can't be as bad as he seems. He must be having an off day. No, I can't predict who will win Thursday night. Of course I hope Maxie does, and with a knockout."

MAX BAER

Some of the boxing writers, among the 400 spectators at the outdoor workout during a light rain, figured that perhaps Maxie has waited too long for this reformation—that he left the primrose path too late to get back into condition.

Barney Ross, Max's Pal, 'Gives Up;' Hoffman Optimistic

However, Manager Ancil Hoffman professed extreme optimism. He insisted that Maxie was working under wraps today for two reasons: (1) to protect a slight gash on his nose, caused a couple of weeks ago by a sparring partner's elbow, and (2) because Maxie already is at fighting edge.

Hoffman explained that Baer trained so hard and long this time that he reached his fighting weight more than a week ago. Hence Hoffman and Trainer Izzy Kline hve tried to prevent him from going stale. Today he weighed 214 pounds, just three more than he expects to scale at Thursday's weigh-in. He may wind up with one round of light sparring tomorrow.

Maxie will break camp Wednesday forenoon and motor into New York, so he can get a good night's sleep in the city on the eve of the bout. His wife, Mary Ellen, and 18-month-old baby, Max, jr., will arrive in the city Wednesday. They will not attend the bout.

Winner Pays $8 in Thrilling Race; Day's Double Brings Talent A $138.20 Payoff

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., May 29.—Ivonia, hard-running 6-year-old mare carrying the colors of R. P. Gillette, who claimed her out of her previous race, set all the pace and lasted to win a thrilling photo finish from Mrs. G. Hutchins' Miss Epe, one who figured in a dead-heat last week. Worthowning, owned by District Commissioner Melvin Hazen who saw the race, was third in the test of a mile and a sixteenth.

Ivonia, ridden by Jockey R. Klein, was the medium of a scattered backing and paid $8. Miss Epe, ridden by Jockey Palumbo, was the favorite. The winner turned in time of 1.48 2-5.

Although no claims of foul were made, Worthowning was crowded by Miss Epe in the stretch. Jockey Machado, who had the mount, was forced to take up sharply when his horse was caught between the two leaders. In addition, Palumbo rode him close during most of the trip.

Ivonia took command almost at once and at one stage held a four-length lead. Worthowning and Miss Epe ran in team fashion behind the leader. Approaching the stretch, Miss Epe began to bear in and she had about a neck advantage over Worthowning. Palumbo came right on and Machado, caught between horses had to stand up in the saddle.

A small portion of the crowd participated in a $138.20 pay-off in the daily double. Tavern started the ball rolling with a rather easy victory at an $8.20 mutuel. Caidon overcame poor racing luck in the early stages of the third race to win at a $8.20 mutuel.

NEVER IDOL, within striking distance from the start, came between horses with a bold move on the backstretch to get to the front and was being taken up at the end. COUNTER PASS, off well and lacking early speed, moved up sharply along the backstretch, took command in the straightaway and was not extending himself in the final stages. ORKIL'S RUSSET, sent to the front at once, set a good pace and continued gamely when displaced. SEA FINN was hard ridden and had no excuses. LAST SCAMP was blocked at the far turn and closed with a rush. ARACHNE failed to rally. ELSIE J. had early speed and stopped. HELEN BAB dropped back.

Fleet of 28 Boats in Final Race Today for Post Trophy

Five Classes To Compete On Potomac

First Helsman Across Line to Get Paper's Cup; Finish Is Due Around 3 o'Clock

Gunston Cove, Va., May 29.—After two days of sailing in driving winds, 28 Washington skippers and their sunburned crews stood ready tonight for the final event of the fifth annual Gunston Cove Regatta—an 11-mile race from here to Alexandria for The Washington Post trophy.

The up-river jaunt will get under way at noon tomorrow when Class C boats answer the starting gun. Five other classes, grouped according to speed, will follow at intervals of a half hour, winding up with the fast 20-foot Restrict Class. The skipper winning the race on corrected time will be awarded the Treasurer's Cup, a trophy set up each year by the incumbent officer of the Potomac River Sailing Association. The Washington Post trophy will go to the helmsman first to cross the finish at Alexandria.

In racing to Alexandria, Potomac River sailors will retrace the course they took Saturday in the race down. Weston W. Valentine's saucy little snipe, Eleanor, sailed off with The Washington Post trophy at the time, leading the fleet across the finish. George Buchan won the Commodore's Cup with his new Lightning Class boat, Vayu, by registering the best corrected time.

H. C. Bush's Cricket II, however, made the fastest passage to the Cove Saturday. Starting an hour and a half after the Class C craft, Cricket II made the 11-mile run in 2 hours, 40 minutes and 20 seconds. His time was exceptionally fast, taking into consideration that the wind came directly up the river.

The entire fleet tacked back and forth nearly the entire course, actually traveling an estimated 18 miles. Today's joker from the weatherman was a forecast that the wind would reverse direction and again greet the skippers in the teeth for tomorrow's race.

With any wind at all, the first boat will cross the finish about 3 p. m. Jack Marsh's seagoing yawl, Ranger, which has been the committee boat over the week-end, will be on hand tomorrow to carry the officials. After the last class has started from the Cove, the Ranger will weigh anchor and pass the fleet under power to Alexandria, where the finish line will be established.

Straightaway Course Mapped for Miles

By the Associated Press.

Easton, Md., May 29.—A special straightaway mile course for boats trying for new world's records will be established at the Miles River Yacht Club's regatta this year, the committee announced.

No races for outboard motorboats are scheduled for the regatta August 4 and 5. In innovation will be a race for workboats used by crabbers, oystermen and fishermen.

The committee has provided trophys for boats making new records over the mile course. This will be opened for speed trials on Saturday morning, August 5. A telephone will be installed to obtain exact start and finish times, easing the difficulty of keeping records.

Eleven events are scheduled for the first day, ending with the workboat race over 5 miles at 3:25 p. m. Included are two of three heats of the Miles River trophy race for unlimited runabouts. The final heat of this event will be run Saturday. Other events on the second day are the hydroplane and cruiser races and a handicap speedboat race.

Other leading twosomes include Tommy Armour and Olin Dutra, two former champions, at the early hour of 8:40, Paul Runyan and Tony Penna, Byron Nelson and Ed Dudley, Ky Laffoon and Johnny Revolta, Vic Ghezzi and Gene Sarazen, George Von Elm and Sam Parks, jr., Jimmy Hines and Johnny Goodman, Sam Byrd and Denny Shute.

Besides Snyder, Meyer and Roberts, other drivers whom the railbirds cast in favorite roles were Wilbur Shaw, Indianapolis; Mauri Rose, Columbus, Ohio; Rex Mays, Glendale, Calif., and Ted Horn, Babe Stapp, Bob Swanson and Kelly Petillo, all of Los Angeles.

Tonight Indianapolis was jammed with race fans. They milled in the downtown district, packed restaurants and taverns to the doors. The line-up of cars waiting for the opening of the speedway gates at 6 a. m. tomorrow stretched out for miles.

Not since 1937 has a driver been killed at the speedway and not since 1935 has a driver met death in the race itself. One spectator was killed last year by a wheel which flew off a race car.

Reds Beat Cubs, 6 to 3; Grissom Allows 5 Hits

Cincinnati Chalks Up 14th Victory in 15 Starts to Continue Pace in National League; Three Hurlers Shelled

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, May 29.—Lee Grissom held the Chicago Cubs to five hits today as the Cincinnati Reds, with a five-run splurge in the eighth, won 6 to 3 for their fourteenth victory in 15 starts.

Gabby Hartnett, Cubs manager, said the latter half of the game was played under protest against an umpire's decision.

The Reds got to General Bill Lee, Earl Whitehill and Jack Russell for 10 blows.

The first four rounds found Lee and Grissom locked in a tight mound duel, Bordagaray's third-inning single and Herman's triple in the next frame being the first for the respective sides.

Gabby pasted a ball against the side of a passing truck, some 400 feet from the plate, for his circuit clout in the fifth.

Then, in the last half of the inning, he engaged in futile harangue against a decision of Umpire George Magerkurth holding Ernie Lombardi safe at second with a double and said he was playing remainder of the game under protest.

Bordagary opened the Reds' eighth inning with a single. Myers' sacrifice was thrown too late to second and both were safe. Bordagaray was forced at third when Lee purposely dropped Grissom's pop bunt. Werber singled to center, scoring Myers. Grissom came in when Frey's long drive hit the screen. Whitehill replaced Lee. Goodman forced Werber at the plate. Frey came home on a wild pitch. On Bartell's low throw, Goodman scored and McCormick was safe at first. After Lombardi singled, J. Russell came to the mound. Craft singled, scoring McCormick to wind up the Reds counters.

Harnett announced after the game the acquisition from Philadelphia of Pitcher Claude Passeau in a straight trade for Outfielder Joe Marty and Pitchers Walter Higbe and Ray Harrell.

Tigers Beat Browns, 10-9; Sweep Series

Higgins Sends Kress Home With Winning Run in Ninth Round

Detroit, May 29.—The Detroit Tigers scored a sweep of their three-game series with St. Louis today by capturing a 31-hit slugfest, 10 to 9.

Frank ((Pinky) Higgins, Detroit third sacker who has been troubled by a leg injury, scored Ralph Kress with the winning run with a robust double after two men were gone in the ninth. Higgins entered the game in the sixth when Billy Rogell, Detroit's only available utility infielder, was struck in the face by a thrown ball.

The Tigers used four hurlers, Archie McKain, Harry Eisenstat, George Coffman and Luther Thomas, the latter getting credit for the win. It was Thomas' first appearance since Detroit claimed him from Washington.

Roxie Lawson, former Tiger, worked the first eight innings for the Browns with George Gill, also a former Bengal, finishing.

Rudy York homered for Detroit in the third with two men on and drove in 4 of the Tiger runs.

Pirates Win, 7-0, Despite Triple Play

Cards Pull First Of Season in 1st Inning but Lose

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 29.—The Pittsburgh Pirates shoved the St. Louis Cardinals deeper into second place today while they moved into third position with a 7-to-0 shutout behind the eight-hit pitching of Bob Klinger.

Pittsburgh's attack was pretty much a two man affair. Bill Brubaker scored the initial run with a homer in the second inning and followed in the third with a timely double that cleaned three occupied bases. Paul Waner accounted for the two runs in the sixth with a circuit clout with one on. Successive doubles by Arky Vaughan and Johnny Rizzo were responsible for the final tally.

The Cardinals executed the first triple play in the majors this season in the first inning. With runners on first and second, Rizzo bounced to Don Gutteridge, who touched third then threw to Stu Martin forcing the man at second, and Martin's throw to first caught Rizzo.

Tot Allows Only Two Hits as Brooklyn Takes Game, 1 to 0

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 29.—Forrest (Tot) Pressnell came near a perfect pitching job today, limiting the Boston Bees to two hits as he hurled the Dodgers to their fourth straight victory by 1-0.

The Dodger run came in the eighth inning and was started by Pressnell himself, when he beat out a hit behind second base. Goodie Rosen walked and after Pressnell was forced at third Fred Sington singled Rosen home with the winning run.

Bank Assails Price-Fixing by Government

Puts Buying Power Cart Before Recovery Horse, Says Guaranty Trust Co.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 29.—The Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, one of the biggest Wall street banks, said today the results of Government price-raising efforts suggest the "cart of purchasing power" was put before the "horse of recovery."

Pointing out that the general commodity price level in the United States has shown no net gain for the past five years, the bank said that prices and the relative position of the farm producer might be more satisfactory today if price manipulation had been avoided entirely and "attention devoted to the single problem of providing a favorable environment for normal business recovery."

"The Government's proposal to barter American cotton and wheat for foreign rubber and tin is the latest move in the long campaign to improve the situation of agriculture in the United States," continued the bank in its monthly economic survey.

"It provides a striking illustration of the situation that has been brought about in international commodity markets in recent years, partly by economic forces, but more largely by political interference with those forces.

"It represents a logical outcome of the attempts that have been made throughout the world to substitute economic planning of various kinds for the free play of natural forces, beginning with price regulation and output restriction for a few great international commodities and culminating in the rigid control of whole economic systems by authoritarian regimes.

"Efforts to promote business expansion in the United States have been handicapped by an excessive preoccupation with the establishment and maintenance of price levels.

"Measures designed to raise prices to predetermined points by artificial means have interfered with the natural readjustments by which markets might have been restored and the volume of activity increased."

Future policy, the bank stated, would be more effective, "if directed toward removal of artificial obstacles to recovery" instead of at price control.

Steel Operations Advance to 52.2%

New York, May 29 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will advance 3.7 points to 52.2 per cent of capacity, compared with 48.5 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago output was at the rate of 47.8 per cent of capacity while a year ago it was 26.1 per cent.

Steel production experts attributed the unusually wide rise in operations to settlement of the coal situation and to the placing of heavy orders by the automobile industry two weeks ago during a brief but spectacular "price war" among the steel companies.

Mr. Becker will continue to serve as chairman of the executive committee, and Dr. Virgil Jordan, who has served the board for 18 years, will continue in the office of president. Five hundred and fifty-six members, associates and guests attended the dinner that followed the executive session.

Rail Operating Net 1.55 Per Cent For Four Months

Class 1 railroads of the United States in the first four months of 1939 had a net railway operating income of $101,066,278 which was at the annual rate of return of 1.55 per cent on their property investment, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads and made public yesterday.

In the first four months of 1936, their net railway operating income was $29,360,310 or 0.45 per cent on their property investment, and in the first four months of 1930, their net railway operating income was $233,942,444, or 3.51 per cent on property investment.

Property investment is the value of road and equipment as shown by the books of the railways, including materials, supplies and cash. The net railway operating income is what is left after the payment of operating expenses, taxes and equipment rentals but before interest and other fixed charges are paid.

$687,767,025 HOLC Bonds Converted

The Treasury announced yesterday that holders of $687,767,025 of Home Owners Loan Corporation bonds called for redemption August 1 had accepted, instead of cash, new 1½ per cent HOLC bonds due 1945 to 1947.

The called issue amounted to approximately $900,000,000. The Treasury has arranged to buy up to $100,000,000 of the new HOLC bonds for investment of other governmental agency trust funds, leaving more than $100,000,000 of the called bonds to be retired by the HOLC sinking fund.

Ratio Thought Low

New York, May 29 (AP).—Wall Street bond men expressed mild surprise today over the Treasury announcement that only about 76 per cent of holders of $900,000,000 Home Owners Loan Corporation bonds called for redemption August 1 had accepted new 1½ per cent HOLC bonds, due 1945-1947, in lieu of cash. In straight Government bond fundings, the percentage of conversions as a rule has run between 95 and 98 per cent.

Wheat Prices Rally After Profit-Taking

Close Fairly Steady On Eve of Holiday; Corn Prices Higher

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 29.—Wheat prices drifted about a cent lower today but then rallied and closed unchanged to ⅜ cent below Saturday's finishing levels.

Profit-taking, encouraged by generally favorable weather for crop development over the week-end, and evening-up operations prior to the Decoration Day holiday, caused the early decline. The day's lows attracted increased purchases and some short covering, however, and when corn prices displayed independent strength wheat recovered after midsession. The outlook for generally fair and warmer weather over much of the grain belt was a mild bullish factor.

Corn values rose as much as ¾ to 1 cent at times, with December contracts, representing the 1939 crop, strongest. Although crop conditions are more favorable due to recent rains, traders said prospect of reduced production this season, with acreage the smallest in 40 years, is a factor in the market.

Wheat, closing unchanged to ⅜ lower compared with Saturday, was quoted at 78@78⅛ for July and 77¾@77⅞ for September. Corn finished ¼ to ⅞ higher, July 51⅜@51¼, September 52⅞@52¾. Oats unchanged to ⅛ lower. Rye ⅛ off to ¼ up. Lard 3 to 8 lower.

Cotton Lower With New Crops Leading Decline

New York, May 29 (AP).—Selling concentrated on distant cotton futures today, July ended off 1 point while new-crop months dropped 10 to 13 points. Pressure represented liquidation by New Orleans accounts and hedge selling by foreign and domestic spot cotton interests.

Relative steadiness of the near month was credited by brokers to continued difficulty of obtaining spot supplies of the staple as well as small certified stocks, the latter now totaling about 19,000 bales, Bombay, however, sold July.

Worth Street news continued optimistic. Sales of print and broadcloths were estimated at close to 10,000,000 yards.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures declined 7 to 9 points today. An anticipated increase in lard stocks in the last half of May, plus continued competition between cottonseed oil and some edible fats, checked buying.

Sales totaled 57 lots; July, 6.63 bid; September, 6.77 bid; December, 6.89; January, 6.90 bid.

A few sales of crude oil were reported in the Southeast at 5½ cents with that figure bid at the close. The valley was quoted 5½ cents bid and Texas, 5¼ to 5.30 bid.

It was the second consecutive weekly decline following a period of several weeks in which the trend was largely upward.

Prices Edge Up in Preholiday Trading Some Issues Reach New Highs for 1939 Treasury and Corporate Bonds Gain

New York, May 29.—Domestic markets picked up a little more ground to reach new highs for the current move today. Volume, reflecting preholiday influences and the Whitsuntide shutdown in Europe as well as the absence of local traders, barely exceeded 600,000 shares. The 100 stocks ended 0.27 point higher with most of the betterment occurring in the last hour. Following a firm opening irregularity developed as the cautious operators shortened lines and some traders cashed profits on the rise of late last week.

Market Acts Well

The performance of the market was considered good, particularly as broker advices to their clients emphasized caution and advised trading positions until such time as the move is definitely identified as an interlude in a bear market or the start of a bull period. There was, however, some justification for optimism. One was improvement in revenues of the class 1 railroads which had net operating income of $15,256,935 for April against $9,397,133 in the like 1938 month. Another was a series of reports giving rise to hope for a prompt settlement of the Briggs Manufacturing Co. strike which last week forced automobile assemblies to a new low for the year.

Of greater importance for its effect on sentiment, however, was the big bulge in steel operations, the rate rising 3.7 points to above 52 per cent of capacity, the best level since March 27. Since output reached its 1939 low of 45.4 per cent two weeks ago, the recovery aggregates 6.8 points.

Steel Viewpoints

The Street realizes, of course, that there are two ways of looking at the steel improvement—one from the viewpoint of the steel producers and the other with respect to steel consumers. In the first instance, prices were cut so deeply on flat-rolled products which comprised the bulk of tonnage placed recently, that producers' profits, if any, will be small. This condition is likely to extend into the third quarter as well as through June. On the other hand, the rise in the steel rate reflects prompt spcification against contracts. This, in turn can only be interpreted as disclosing immediate need for supplies by automotive and other buyers.

To reason a bit further, it would seem plain that the dearth of buying in the last half of April and the first half of the current month was not because consumers were not interested, but merely because they were holding out for bargain prices. Some of them have run rather low on material before the price break gave them the opportunity to stock up. To this extent they appear to have out-maneuvered the steelmakers.

Loft came back into prominence as the active leader and United States Rubber gained nearly a point on steady buying. Interest in the latter company's issues has been a feature for quite a long time although the common is still quite a way from the year's high. There is quite a difference of opinion among the analysts as to whether common dividends can be expected this year, although earnings are said to be continuing at a substantial rate.

Motor issues were well represented in the actively traded list, including General Motors at a ⅝ advance, and Chrysler, up 2. Continental, with a turnover of 11,500 shares, advanced ⅜, an important gain for such a low-priced issue. In the steels; Bethlehem, Youngstown and United States Steel each added more than a point. Metal issues, while more or less dull, were large fractions to more than a point better.

Bond Market Better

Listed bonds slowly improved today in a session made even more quiet than usual by the impending holiday. Turnover amounted only to $4,320,000. United States Treasury obligations were slightly better, while small gains appeared in an impressively long list of corporate bonds. In the foreign department German bonds did better than others owing to the announcement that partial payment in dollars again will be available on one of the Government issues.

The upturn in Treasury bonds halted, for the time being at least, a downward movement that developed last week on indications of even more deficit financing. Gains ranged to ¼ point, which left the list just a shade under all-time highs. Guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home Corporations were idle but firm. Best-rated utility railroad and industrial bonds were better, where changed.

Rail Bonds in Demand

Medium-priced railroad bonds were in fair request, owing partly to the program for legislative aid. Baltimore & Ohio bonds especially were in demand, and some of the default issues also reflected the better sentiment. Holding company bonds were dull, but some of the industrial convertibles did well. The local tractions were irregular, but communications issues advanced. Other special groups disclosed minor gains.

German bonds moved up from fractions to two points on the indication of continued dollar payments on the Young loan, while Czech 8s were 3 to 5 points up. Italian 7s were dull, and best-grade foreigns of Australian, Canadian and Scandinavian origin barely moved. Some demand developed for Argentine issues, but Latin-American default obligations were neglected.

Careful Sorting Pays Dividends To Tobacco Farms

The careful sorting of tobacco before it is offered for sale has been paying dividends at the southern Maryland tobacco auctions. Sales at Upper Marlboro and Hughesville, the Federal Bureau of Agriculture Economics said yesterday, are revealing to growers the extent to which sorting means higher prices for their tobacco.

Since the auctions started in early May, the bureau specialists have been collecting information on prices paid at these markets. They report that a considerable number of baskets offered for sale are mixed. Some are so badly mixed that they are withdrawn from the sale to protect the growers, and are then resorted and sold as separate lots. A charge of 25 cents per 100 pounds is made by warehouses for sorting the badly mixed lots. Though this charge is a reasonable one, the bureau points out that farmers can save this expense by careful sorting of their tobacco at their barns.

Other lots of tobacco, not too badly mixed to be marketable have sold at 3 to 5 cents a pound below the average prices paid for tobacco of unmixed qualities.

Bureau specialists recommend that tobacco be sorted, hand by hand, before it is marketed. In cases where the mixing is due to bad stripping, they recommend that green, off-color and badly diseased leaves be taken out, for the difference in price received more than pays for the time and trouble taken.

Good Year Predicted For Meat Packers

New York, May 29.—Earnings of meat packing companies in the current fiscal year are expected to be the best since 1929, according to Poor's Industry and Investment Surveys. The hog slaughter should approach normal, and the cattle and lamb slaughter will be well sustained. Meat prices have been steadied at about the lowest levels in several years. This fact should stimulate consumption, in view of the slowly rising trend of employment.

"Fair-sized earnings characterized operations of meat-packing companies in the first six months of the fiscal year to end October 31, 1939," states the analysis. "This is in sharp contrast to results in the first six months of the 1937-38 period, when large losses were experienced."

Treasury Borrows At 0.004 Per Cent

The Secretary of the Treasury announces that the tenders for $100,000,000 or thereabouts, of 91-day Treasury bills, to be dated May 31 and to mature August 30, 1939, which were offered on May 24, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

The total applied for was $392,040,000 and the total accepted $100,521,000. The average bid was 99.999, equivalent to a rate of 0.004 per cent.

London, May 29 (AP).—European markets have begun the Whitsuntide holidays. The stock exchange and metal market in London, wheat and cotton futures in Liverpool suspended trading until Tuesday morning. Also closed were financial and commodity markets in France, Belgium, Holland and Germany.

Furniture Output Is 42 Per Cent Above Year Ago

Chicago, May 29 (AP).—Furniture production increased 42 per cent last month compared with April, 1938, members to the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers reported today.

The report showed orders increased 10 per cent, shipments 25 per cent and unfilled orders 39 per cent over April last year.

Compared with March this year, however, orders decreased 22 per cent, shipments 17 per cent, unfilled orders 16 per cent and production 9 per cent.

Orders for the first four months this year were 20 per cent ahead of those for the corresponding 1938 period, shipments were 17 per cent better and production 27 per cent greater.

Business Tide Rises After Recent Ebb

Steel Demand Spurred By Price Reductions; Income Index Higher

New York, May 29.—The recent deterioration in basic conditions has been interrupted by a moderate improvement, the Alexander Hamilton Institute says today. In addition, the demand for steel has been stimulated by a reduction in prices. As a result the estimate of the annual normal demand for steel in 1939 has been revised upward to 37.2 per cent of capacity from the 1939 low of 36.2 per cent last week.

Actual output has also rallied and the steel industry is now working at 48.5 per cent of capacity as against the 1939 low of 45.4 per cent a week ago. The prospect is, however, that the curtailment of steel output will be resumed since production is still abnormally high despite a more favorable demand situation. Prospective normal requirements during the remainder of this year represent only 27.3 per cent of the steel industry's capacity to produce.

The index of business income, for the week ended May 13, rose to 72.9 from recession's low of 72.0 in the previous week. The index of business expenses remained unchanged at the previous week's figure of 78.7. The excess of expenses over income, consequently, dropped to 5.8 points from 6.7 points in the preceding week, thus making the most favorable showing since the last week in March.

In the week ended May 13, the price index of farm products, which reflects the national income, staged a moderate rally from the recession's low in the preceding week. The index of manufactured goods prices showed no change for the fourth consecutive week. Consequently, the purchasing power index rose from 7.2 to 72.2, thus bringing to a halt the downward tendency which started in the middle of March.

Brazil Suspends Cocoa Sales for Blocked Marks

The American Embassy at Rio de Janeiro reported yesterday that the Bank of Brazil has suspended the sale of Brazilian cocoa for German blocked marks. The blocked marks could have been used by Brazil only for the purchase of German goods.

The suspension of blocked-mark dealings in cocoa followed, the bank advised the American Embassy, the contracting of German firms for the purchase of 240,000 bags of Bahia cocoa.

The embassy cable, which was made public by the Commerce Department, also said that Brazil had made arrangements to liquidate by June 15 all arrears in American exchange. This means that Brazil will make enough dollars available to Brazilian importers to enable them to pay debts to United States exporters.

House Sugar Bloc Shelves Ellender Bill

By the Associated Press.

Representative Cummings (Democrat), Colorado, disclosed yesterday that a Congressional sugar bloc had agreed to drop efforts for passage this session of the Ellender bill, which would reduce by 280,000 tons the annual import quota for Cuban sugar.

Cummings, re-elected president of the bloc composed of members from sugar-producing States, said he would appoint a special committee to meet in December on legislation affecting both beet and cane sugar producers. The group intends, he said, to get a bill ready early for next session.

Cummings said it was the opinion at today's meeting that the Ellender bill should not be pushed because this was "not a good psychological" time.

U. S. Incomes Two Per Cent Over Year Ago

Commerce Department Figures 1939 Total At 65 Billions

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department estimated yesterday that national income in the first four months of 1939 totaled $21,561,000,000, a gain of 2 per cent over the corresponding period of last year.

A continuation of the same increase over 1938 would result in a national income this year of $65,600,000,000, compared with $64,200,000,000 for 1938.

Included in national income are all payments to individuals—wages, salaries, dividends, interest, income from enterprise and relief payments.

The seasonally adjusted index of income payments dropped from 84.1 in March to 82.6 in April, but is now 3 per cent above the 1938 low of 80.4, recorded last May. The decline in the index in April, the department said, reflected largely shutdown in bituminous coal production.

Other depressing influences, the department said, were a sharp drop in unemployment insurance benefits and a 5 per cent decline in direct and work relief payments.

Income received by employes in the first four months of 1939 was 4 per cent above the total for the like period last year. Interest payments were practically unchanged, but dividend disbursements were down 8 per cent and income from enterprise was off 2 per cent.

New York, May 29.—Daily average sales of fluid milk during April increased 1.08 per cent over the same period a year ago, according to reports from leading distributors in 136 markets to the Milk Industry Foundation.

This is the second consecutive month for which an increase has been reported following decreases that began with November, 1937. In April daily average sales totaled 6,520,924 quarts compared with 6,450,723 quarts in April, 1938.

Montgomery Democrats In Jobs Fight

MONTGOMERY COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone SHepherd 4200.

First public rift in the harmony agreement of the Democratic Party of Montgomery County became apparent yesterday when County Commissioner John E. Oxley, member of the former anti-organization faction, clashed with his three Organization confreres over appointments made by the board of county commissioners.

Oxley moved that Clay Plummer, former county commissioner and opposition leader, be appointed police civil service commissioner and urged that 7 of the 15 policemen appointed be selected from a list he had prepared.

The Organization commissioners, T Earle Hampton, T. W. Farmer and O. W. Roby, however, proceeded in executive session to appoint their own selections, including B. Peyton Whalen, of Bethesda, appointed police civil service commissioner, and chairman of the police trial board.

Oxley also opposed appointment of Ralph Chase as secretary to the president of the board, contending it was merely provision of a "publicity agent."

Dies Still Ill, But Inquiry Will Continue

Gen. Moseley to Testify Tomorrow; U. S. Official Warned

Representative Dies (Democrat), who went to his home State of Texas last week, will remain at least a month to recover his health, it was learned yesterday.

The burly, blond chairman of the Committee on Un-American Activities, failing to recover from a recent operation as rapidly as had been expected, has been advised by his doctors to take a "rest cure."

Meanwhile, the committee, currently engaged in an expose of pro-Fascist and anti-Semitic groups in the United States, will reconvene tomorrow to hear testimony of Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, former commander of the Fourth Corps Area. Moseley's name has been prominently linked with movements of the type under investigation. Chairman pro tem of the committee will be Representative Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts.

Discharged From Army

The committee possesses evidence, the International News Service reported, that one anti-Semitic leader was discharged from military service because he suffered from dementia praecox. Dies was said to have forbidden publication of the medical evidence in the case out of consideration for the man's family and also in the belief that his testimony had sufficiently discredited him.

Another of the anti-Semitic agitators served his Army enlistment under a different name from the one he now uses, it was stated.

A letter warning a high Government official that he might "in the very near future stop some hot lead" has been turned over to postal authorities for investigation, the INS said.

Naval officers' reports that the "loyalty, morality and discipline of enlisted men have been affected by their membership in "communistic or other organizations" will be looked into by the Dies committee, it was said yesterday.

Some men have been discharged from the Navy because they belonged to groups considered "at odds with the purposes of national defense," naval officers stated at House Judiciary sub-committee hearings on a bill to regulate subversive movements. Representative Walters (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, said yesterday that Dies had promised "a thorough investigation."

In Sanitarium

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, JR., the former Ethel duPont, was at Riggs Sanitarium, Stockbridge, Mass., last night "overtired" and "seeking a few days of rest." Dr. Austen Fox Riggs, clinical professor of neurology at Columbia University and head of the sanitarium, said "she came here a few days ago, I don't remember the exact date." Her husband, the President's son, accompanied her there, but later left, Dr. Riggs said

Divers Moving Squalus Into Shallow Water

Cold and Currents Force Salvagers to Change Their Plans

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, N. H., May 29.—Battling the triple threat of tidal currents, numbing cold and freezing air lines, Navy divers tonight completed the first preparatory step of a newly adopted plan to carry on the salvage of the submarine Squalus in shallower and warmer waters.

Icy temperatures and the 40-fathom depth in which the Squalus and her 26 dead lay 15 miles off this port forced adoption of a plan which entailed moving the sunken vessel shoreward in three steps with the aid of huge pontoons. The original program will then be carried out.

As a sudden northeasterly wind forced suspension of diving, arrangements were being completed for Memorial Day services for the Squalus' dead.

Ashore, the 33 rescued and relatives of those 26 who died in the flooded after compartments are to attend services in the Portsmouth Navy Yard auditorium.

At sea, the cruiser Brooklyn will fire 21 guns at noon as the other craft half-mast their ensigns.

Murphy Maps Clean-up of U. S. Politics

Will 'Strike Hard' If Cities, States Do Not Purge Selves

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, May 29.—Attorney General Murphy today disclosed the Federal Government is prepared to "strike hard" in a "purge" to clean up American politics "if city and State governments won't clean up of their own accord."

"Where it will strike I cannot disclose, but it will strike hard," Murphy said in a press conference while pausing here briefly on a trip with J. Edgar Hoover, F. B. I. director.

Murphy said the income tax sentence against Boss Tom Pendergast in Kansas City and the bribery trial of Federal Judge Manton in New York were only the opening and isolated battles in an integrated national campaign which he described as coincident with "the challenge of the democracies by the dictatorships."

"The answer of the democracies must be true, sure, certain safety; if democracy is not to succumb. That means civil liberties. It means clean, honest government. It means that the forces of vice and crime, with the money they command, and their unholy alliance with partisan politics, must be brought to trial and convicted in honest courts, and must stand for their punishment."

"My department is now at the start of a national campaign to clean America up. The purge is on. . . . The people, who are the backbone of any democracy, have no sense of safety any more. It must be restored to them . . ."

Japanese Airmen Raiding Foochow Slay 30 Civilians

Foochow, China, May 29 (AP).—Japanese air raiders today bombed Foochow for the eighth and ninth times in four days, apparently in a regular campaign to terrorize the population of this south China port. Death toll is undetermined.

Raids todya were aimed primarily at government schools. Loss of life was slight as students had been removed inland.

One Japanese seaplane was forced to alight in the Min River because of engine trouble. Its crew opened machine-gun fire on a passing launch, killing an estimated 30 noncombatants. The plane later took off after emergency repairs.

Judge Orders Pa. Democrat Chiefs to Trial

Upholds Indictments On Pay Roll Padding, Extortion Charges

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 29.—A dozen high-ranking Pennsylvania Democrats today were given two weeks to make ready for trial on various charges of pay roll padding and extortion of campaign funds under indictments sustained by a judge who said there would be no appeal from his ruling.

District Attorney Carl B. Shelley said he had not decided which of the Democratic leaders, including three members of the cabinet of former Gov. Earle, would be called first, June 12.

In sustaining the indictments, Judge Howard W. Hughes overruled the contention of counsel for the 12 that the indictments were obtained "illegally." They charged the jurors had been "unduly influenced" by the Republican district attorney, Shelley, and his staff.

First hurled by Democrats against Democrats in the heated primary campaign of 1938, the charges were taken up by Republicans in the fall campaign in which they won back control of the State.

The indictments, listing different charges against those named, included coercion and "macing" of State employes for campaign contributions, pay roll padding in the highway department, blackmail, conspiracy to control the State's bonding business, and violation of election laws.

Former cabinet members named are David L. Lawrence, Democratic State chairman and former secretary of the Commonwealth; Ralph M. Bashore, secretary of the State Democratic committee and former secretary of labor and industry, and Roy E. Brownmiller, former secretary of highways.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Probably more new theories, bids and plays are developed in championships than anywhere else—not only because of the keen competition, which requires orginality for success, but also because there are hundreds of narrators on the spot who will remember the unusual procedure and carry it to their own bridge circles. It is safe to conclude that many innovations are discovered at rubber bridge but most of them fall into the discard to be remembered solely by the perpetrator, if at all.

A semi-psychic opening bid, met by a Blackwood response which jumped the bidding too high for the adversaries to discover they had a game, is shown in today's box. The deal, played by Jeff Glick and related to us by Uncle Bing, of Buffalo, appeared in a recent Terre Haute tournament.

In describing the novel situation, Mr. Glick says:

"For the first time in my life I met a situation where I did not care whether my partner had a bid or not.

"I held the South hand. We were playing Blackwood. When my partner opened with a heart which was overcalled by East with two spades, I did not care if he had a bid or if he was completely psychic, with a blank hand.

"I reasoned: If he has two aces, the hand must play in slam. If he has a lot of meat over there, we can play five hearts, undoubled, against a probable spade game. I bid a Blackwood four no trump. After the five-diamond response, showing one ace, I bid five hearts, which was passed out, undoubled; down one trick against a laydown vulnerable spade game the other way. East passed the bid out, thinking we should be in slam."

At five hearts North lost a spade a club, and a trump.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Neither as a "scalping savage" nor a pathetic individual "at the end of the trail" are the Indians portrayed in the murals of Maynard Dixon, recently put on display in the Indian Office section of the new Department of Interior Building.

The theme of the paintings is to illustrate the transitions through which the Red Men are passing under the influence of modern civilization.

Comes good news for duck hunters in the memo of the Department of Agriculture that the trend of wild duck numbers is decidedly upward. The Biological Survey's midwinter inventory reveals that about 14,500,000 birds now are on the wing as compared with 12,250,000 last year.

You, and you, and you (also your friends) are invited to be the guests of the National Capital Parks Friday at 8 p. m. in Departmental Auditorium when the "Premier 1939 Campfire Program," put on by the Park Service and the Nature Photographic Society, gets under way.

Outdoor subjects in national parks and elsewhere, photographed in color and at unusual angles, will be the order of the night's entertainment. Earl A. Trager, chief naturalist of the Park Service, will discuss scenic photography, and Anton Bauman will show the pictures.

President Luther C. Steward and Secretary-Treasurer Gertrude M. McNally yesterday sent letters to presidents of all local unions and State and national federations of the National Federation of Government Employes requesting that they submit names of their nominees for the annual award to the individual making the greatest contribution to the advancement of the organization in the last year. Nominations must be at national headquarters of the N. F. G. E. at Labor Building here by July 8.

In case you still are under the impression that business is having a tough time, word comes from the Interior Department that more than $100,000,000 has flowed into the pockets of American manufacturers and businessmen supplying the materials used in the construction of Boulder and Grand Coulee dams. Boulder is nearly completed while Grand Coulee construction has several years to run, it is pointed out.

Members of Congress who also are members of The Grange are to be invited guests at the Congressional dinner on June 6, sponsored by Potomac Grange No. 1. Also invited are officials and ranking staff members of the Department of Agriculture and other agricultural service agencies.

Robert William Davis is general chairman of the event and Kirk E. Wallace is in charge of arrangements. The guest speaker will be Francis Pickens Miller, of Fairfax, member of the Virginia House of Delegates.

The story of the new official master map of the United States, soon to be issued by the General Land Office, will be told by the National Broadcasting Co. on June 4. Eighty-five stations in the country will carry the program and short wave will carry it to Europe and South America.

The hand-engraved cartographer's masterpiece represents surveying operations on more than 1,800,000,000 acres of public land, dating back to the early days of the Government.

In a move toward conservation of vast undeveloped phosphate resources in Florida, comprising a potential supply of 20,000,000,000 tons, Secretary of the Interior Ickes yesterday ordered an investigation into the advisability of reserving the right of the United States in connection with applications for sale or lease of public domain in that State.

Testimony before Congressional hearings showed that at least half of Florida includes a geological strata, known as the "Hawthorne formation," which includes phosphates.

Bob Burns Says—

Lots of times it pays big dividends to be generous. I don't mean you oughta bribe folks to win their friendship, but a gift or a kindness once in a while makes folks like you a heap more—and makes you happy, too. Little Cousin Wafford made a life-long friend of every kid in Figure 5 School last fall with a little gift. He gave 'em all a vacation by comin' to school with the mumps.

Uncle Hod, who's been married and divorced five times in the last three years, took his cixth bride to the preacher last week. That's the Rev. Tweedle, D. D., the most generous man in Van Buren. After the Rev. Tweedle had married 'em, Hod reached in his pocket and said, "Brother Tweedle, how much do I owe you this time?"

The Rev. Tweedle said, "Nothing this time, Hod. This one's on the house."

Secrets in Love

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

CHAPTER XXIII

Nadeja Damara helped Emmanuel into the small, dirty room, half-carried, half-dragged him to the low iron bed. She was trembling violently as she drew off his coat and saw the bloody mass of his shoulder. For so long now every instinct had been alert, trained for danger. She said swiftly: "Don't try to tell me what happened. Tell me only—were you followed?"

Emmanuel groaned. "No," he whispered. "I made sure." He gritted his teeth then and closed his eyes. Then he said weakly through lips contorted with agony: "Thank God, you're a nurse . . ."

In the next ten minutes Nadeja did not speak at all. A bullet had cut sharply through Emmanuel's upper arm, he had bled profusely. She stopped that bleeding with a tourniquet made of a torn sheet, she bathed and washed the wound and soaked the arm with iodine.

Nadeja's Past

A little while later she sat beside the bed, feeling Emmanuel's quivering pulse, checking his respiration, assuring herself that she had done everything she could. He was too weak to talk yet. He could not tell her what had happened. He just lay there with his eyes closed, his mouth a little open.

She sat beside him just as she had sat beside endless wounded men in the year between 1914 and 1918. And suddenly she was trembling again, cold with a terrible spiritual iciness that lay like frost throughout her body.

Nadeja Damara didn't permit herself to think about the past very often or to wonder about the future. But moving about as a nurse in these last few minutes had made the years fall away. She was seeing herself as she had once been. In 1914. A very young and a fiercely, beautifully patriotic girl, with a burning patriotism that had made her tremble with fear for her native land when the first cries of EXTRA told of the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian throne, and his consort at Sarajevo. People clamoring through the cobblestoned streets that day had cried War! War! And there had been war. A war in which she had served her country as a nurse and, later, the audacious and dangerous service of spy.

For her country she had stood once before a firing squad, had refused a blindfold and had stood there, too frightened to cry, too frozen in terror to plead. Only at the last moment to hear that her sentence had been commuted to imprisonment because of her splendid nursing record, because of her tireless service to the enemy wounded. Later she had escaped.

She had known what it was to see enemy secret service agents gathered around her on a train where she appeared to have fallen asleep, holding in their hands the little cameo in the back of which they had found the military information her country had sent her across the border to get.

She had known what it was to leap off of that roaring train into black night, to drag her broken and tortured body to a small creek, to submerge in it as men lit torches and beat bushes looking for her.

She had known what it was to trick a very young officer into betraying his country; to stand with her hands crushed against her mouth as he stepped to the window of her room, stood there one moment looking at her through eyes that were already dead and then had flung himself to death . . .

The flame of duty, of patriotism, of loyalty had purified that horrible moment and all the others, had burnt out the shame of what she had done. She had been a soldier, too, fighting for her country, risking her life, gladly giving it if it became necessary . . .

Facing Death

And she had known what it was to send a message across the border that the enemy were massing outside the village in thousands for a religious service, for planes to come and wipe them out.

She had experienced the sensation of being told that some of the wounded men wanted to go to the service and as nurse she must accompany them in the hospital ambulance. She had gone bravely, riding to almost certain oblivion. She had seen her own country's planes circling above that mass of soldiers, spitting death down on them.

But the glorious death of a martyr, or an Edith Cavell, had not been for her. She had been destined to live; to see a sort of peace that wasn't a peace at all in the world. She had been destined to live and to marry Stefan Greigg, whose eyes had blotted out everything else in life, whose hands had found her soul something of wax which could be molded into any distortion he desired. He was now, known as Emmanuel. To fall so hopelessly in love that he could persuade her to join him in his loathsome efforts to make a fortune.

There was no glory in this, no fierce burning patriotism. For she and Emmanuel were two of an international organization, a vulturous organization, that spied not for patriotism, but for money; who peddled their information to the country most interested and willing to pay the highest price.

Emmanuel opened his eyes then and Nadeja brushed a cold hand across her forehead as if to wipe away her thoughts. She said, softly: "Feeling better, Stefan?" and hardly realized that she had called him by that long-lost name.

He said, weakly: "Some. The whisky helped. I'll be all right in a few days."

Looking at him, Nadeja felt her heart begin to stir. He was still as darkly handsome as that first day when she had met him in the Musee Grevin in Paris.

She said then: "Do you feel strong enough now to tell me what happened, Emmanuel?"

What Happened

He told her everything that had happened at the little house in Georgetown. "Luck has been steadily against me in Washington," he said, evenly. "You failed utterly with Duncan Patterson . . ."

Nadeja winced a little. Duncan Patterson was her first failure. He had been in love with her—but not enough; not with the blind madness that men had once loved her. She blamed it on her age, the realization that beneath her careful make-up there was no power of beauty she had once possessed.

"Duncan Patterson could have been useful to us." Emmanuel was saying, bitterly. "He had the files of the Munitions Building at his fingertips, information concerning experiments at Wright Field, his own inventions. There was a fortune in it for us, but you muffed it somehow. And I'm not at all sure that he wasn't using you. How did Margaret Patterson know what was in your gold chatelaine that night if there wasn't a leak somewhere?"

When Nadeja opened her lips to hotly deny that, Emmanuel went on quickly: "We eliminated Paul Stranyan and the waiter. There was no one else but Margaret Patterson who could have got it."

Nadeja bit her lower lip. "If we hadn't had to leave the city because of Pedro Gonzales, things would have gone better for us. We lost so much valuable time, Emmanuel. But there wasn't anything else we could do under the circumstances."

For one moment she closed her eyes. She could see very plainly the two Gonzales brothers in their garage, Pedro realizing too late the valuable information she had stolen out of his safe, his stupid wild pursuit of her in the face of her revolver.

She had been a fool, of course, to have worn the old woman disguise again. But then a great many mistakes are made in this dangerous business and she had been so sure that Pedro and Raoul Gonzales had left the city.

Then, that afternoon trailing Margaret Patterson, not knowing she was Duncan Patterson's sister, she had been vaguely aware of someone shadowing her. She had followed Margaret Patterson inside the office building, had located the Otto Nelson brokerage office door, through which the girl had disappeared. She had satisfied herself that this was where she worked. She had taken the elevator to the basement, had wound around through dark corridors and finally out an alley entrance.

She had shaken Pedro Gonzales; but not for long. There was a note that night in her box at the hotel. That casual little invitation asking Nadeja and Emmanuel in for cocktails had not fooled her. Pedro had recognized her somehow, despite the disguise.

That night she and Emmanuel had flown to Chicago, had disposed of the papers. They couldn't understand why they hadn't been followed.

Not until a few weeks later when they had read of Pedro and Raoul Gonzales having been arrested and tried as spies. In any other country they would have stood before a firing squad after their trial. But the United States handles its spies more gently. Pedro and Raoul were deported and she and Emmanuel had returned promptly to Washington.

Card in Code

Emmanuel reached over and took Nadeja's hand in his. He held her fingers tightly in his cold palm, the massive gold ring she wore with a serpent coiling over the green stone bit against her flesh. He said: "Our luck will change, Nadeja. I think we'll get the card back somehow. We have to. We're stuck until we do. After all, the message on the outside of the card was in code. It would be difficult for anyone but us to decode it. And unless they managed that they wouldn't know about tearing the sides apart and finding what is really important inside. When I'm up and around I'll find a way to make Margaret Patterson tell what she knows and . . ."

His voice cut off sharply. Nadeja went rigid in her chair. They both turned their heads simultaneously and looked at the door. The knock came again and still they did not move. And then there was a voice, gruffly commanding:

"This is the police. Open the door."
